SPACE CENTER, Houston, Saturday (UPI) —America's Apollo 11, now firmly in the grip of the moon's gravitational pull, zeroed in today on the lunar surface where astronaut Neil A. Armstrong will take his first historic step Sunday night or early Monday.

The spacecraft, carrying Armstrong, his fellow moonwalker, Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin, and command ship pilot Michael Collins, fell under the moon's dominance at 8:12 p.m. PDT Friday.

At that point, they were 214,402 miles from Earth, and 38,895 miles from the moon. In relation to Earth, they were traveling at 2,300 mph.

By 4:30 a.m. PDT today Apollo's plotted course showed it 230,430 miles from earth 17,289 miles from the moon, and its speed accelerated to 2,732 miles per hour.

FINAL STAGES of lunar landing are shown in these diagrams. The lunar module will carry astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin to the moon's surface while Michael Collins remains in the command module in orbit 69 miles above the moon. The lower part of the lunar module will be left on the moon. (Other illustrations, Pages A-4, 5)

Thousands Stranded in Subways

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stalled subway trains stranded about 20,000 commuters Friday night in grimy tunnels described as hot ovens. One man died and police estimated up to 500 persons were injured or overcome by the heat.

Police and fire department rescue crews carried many victims out on stretchers, others groped their way through the tunnels to the surface of Manhattan's steamy streets, forming human chains so none would get lost.

A MAN was found dead on the tracks near 120th Street and police at first believed he had been hit by a train. Doctors reported later, however, that there was no evidence of injury. The victim carried no identification papers.

The trains stalled on the Lexington Avenue line at rush hour when a thunderstorm which temporarily dropped the 92 degree temperatures, caused a flash flood at the 138th Street station and all power had to be shut off on the northbound tracks.

Some passengers remained in the trains, but many, finding the heat and the wait intolerable, spilled out onto the tracks and all power had to be shut off on the southbound tracks, stalling a total of 20 trains in each direction. Each train carried 1,000 to 1,500 passengers.

THE TRANSIT authority said no power would be restored on the lines until patrolmen check the tunnels to determine if everyone was out.

Nixon Hit, Lauded on Birth Curb

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Nixon's goal of making birth-control information available to all American women drew a warning Friday from a Roman Catholic spokesman that such a program would put too much pressure on the poor.

The President's plan to make the information available to all women of child-bearing age within five years, however, drew praise from population and sex information experts.

"It may not be the wish of the government people," said Msgr. Hugh Curran, director of the Roman Catholic archdiocesan family life bureau in New York. "But there is an implicit pressure in receiving from the same hand both a welfare check and advice on what to do to keep the family down."

"The real question is one of freedom," Msgr. Curran said, "not of contraception."

HE ADDED that he did not think it was "the proper role of the government to embark on a contraceptive program."

Nixon's program would mean spending an eventual $150 million more a year to provide family planning advice and contraceptive devices to all eligible women from low-income families — an estimated 5.4 million of them.

In a special message to Congress, the chief executive emphasized:

"Clearly, in no circumstances will the activities associated with our pursuit of this goal be allowed to infringe upon the religious convictions or personal wishes and freedom of any individual, nor will they be allowed to impair the absolute right of all individuals

After being assured that Russia's mystery lunar satellite would not interfere with their mission, the space fliers checked out their lunar lander Friday before a worldwide television audience and found it all set for moon landing — man's first venture into a world other than his own.

"Everything seems to be in place," said Armstrong.

"The vehicle is surprisingly free of any debris floating around. It's very clean, seconded Aldrin, the man who will accompany Armstrong on the moon walk while the third astronaut, Collins, flies the command ship in a 69 mile high lunar orbit.

The astronauts beamed to earth a spectacular more than hour-long color television cast of Armstrong and Aldrin making the transfer from the command ship, "Columbia," to the lunar lander, "Eagle."

Apollo was 201,000 miles from earth and 45,000 miles from the moon and speeding at 2,120 mph at the time the TV show began.

ONE OF the few pieces of debris they found — a loose washer — floated in front of the television camera in the weightlessness of space and one of the astronauts reached out and grabbed it.

The neat condition of the lunar lander and the tunnel linking the two spacecraft was in sharp contrast to the flood of loose insulation the Apollo 10 crew found when it opened the hatch to inspect the lunar lander carried on that flight. The problem of the insulation

Astronauts Fire the First of Critical Rocket Blasts

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Saturday (UPI) — The long wait for Apollo 11 astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins ends at 10:26 a.m. PDT today.

That is the first of several critical rocket firings — some have never been done in space before — that must work if Armstrong and Aldrin are to walk the face of the moon and return safely to Earth.

The first blast puts Columbia, the command ship, with Eagle, the lunar module, still attached to its nose, into a looping orbit around the moon. Should the engine not fire, the spacecraft merely would whip around the moon and return to Earth.

FAILURE OF SOME of the others could mean death for two or all three astronauts.

"As any flight, the things that give one most concern are those which have not been done previously," Armstrong said before the flight.

"There are other things that we always concern ourselves about greatly and that is those situations where we have no alternative method to do the job," he said.

Armstrong said the spacecraft's big rocket engine must work if Apollo 11 is to return from the moon. Similarly, the liftoff engine on the Eagle moon lander must work if he and Aldrin get off the moon's surface.

"We have very high confidence level in those systems, incidentally," Armstrong said.

ARMSTRONG, Aldrin and Collins used the ship's big engine — although only briefly — Thursday to make a small course correction to sharpen their aim on the moon.

No one really expects trouble with Apollo 11's rocket engines—they have worked too well in previous flights and tests.

But as Collins, who will orbit the moon while Armstrong and Aldrin land, says, all the little phases have to work for a successful mission.

"Spaceflight is the sort of thing that's pretty easy as long as everything goes well and pretty difficult when things start not going well."

IF ALL GOES, well, Collins' command ship acts

Another sultry siege of warm, moist weather is forecast for the Long Beach area today, as thunderstorm cells continue skip-and-run tactics across the Southland.

Humidity marks approached temperature readings when masses of rain-laden clouds moved into Southern California from Mexico. Highs in downtown Long Beach Friday were 75 per cent humidity and 90 degrees air temperature.

Forecasters expect similar conditions today, with slightly less humidity Sunday and on "Moon Day" Monday.

Thundershowers hit the Coachella Valley and other Southland desert areas. Flash-flooding was reported between Indio and Blythe with numerous road washouts.

An exodus of motorists, bound for desert and mountain resorts, caused traffic pileups east, north and south from the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

El Salvador, Honduras War Is Over

By The Associated Press

El Salvador accepted a four-point peace plan Friday night to end its undeclared war with Honduras and a report received in San Salvador said Honduras had accepted several hours earlier. The peace plan was drafted by the Organization of American States in Washington.

Some hours earlier, Salvadoran President Fidel Sanchez Hernandez announced he would not withdraw his troops from Honduras until he had firm guarantees for the safety of Salvadoran citizens living there.

False Teeth Truths

Q. Is it possible to go to a dental laboratory and have dentures made and fitted without going through a dentist? H.T., Garden Grove.

Q. How much training in denture fitting must a dental student and a denture specialist have? N.M.S., Lakewood.

* A. It is against the law for an individual who is not a licensed dentist to fit a patient with dentures, under Section 1627 of the California Business and Professions Code, said David Hamrock, senior investigator for the California Board of Dental Examiners. Dental students at USC and UCLA receive both laboratory and clinical training in denture making and fitting throughout their four years in dental school. They are also required to make a number of dentures before they are graduated. Under state law, any licensed dentist can make and fit dentures. However, the American Dental Association has set up requirements for a member dentist who wants to limit his practice to prosthodontics — the making and fitting of dentures and other artificial devices. In order to be certified by the Board of Prosthodontics of the association, a dentist must take two years of additional training in the specialty beyond his dental degree. HEYERDAHL LEAVES RA 600 MILES OUT CHRISTIANSTED, V.I. — Thor Heyerdahl abandoned his battered reed boat Ra 600 miles short of his goal Friday night after sharks chased away his six crewmen as they tried to repair the craft.

The seven men scrambled aboard the escorting fishing craft Shenandoah and left the Ra drifting with a small sail.

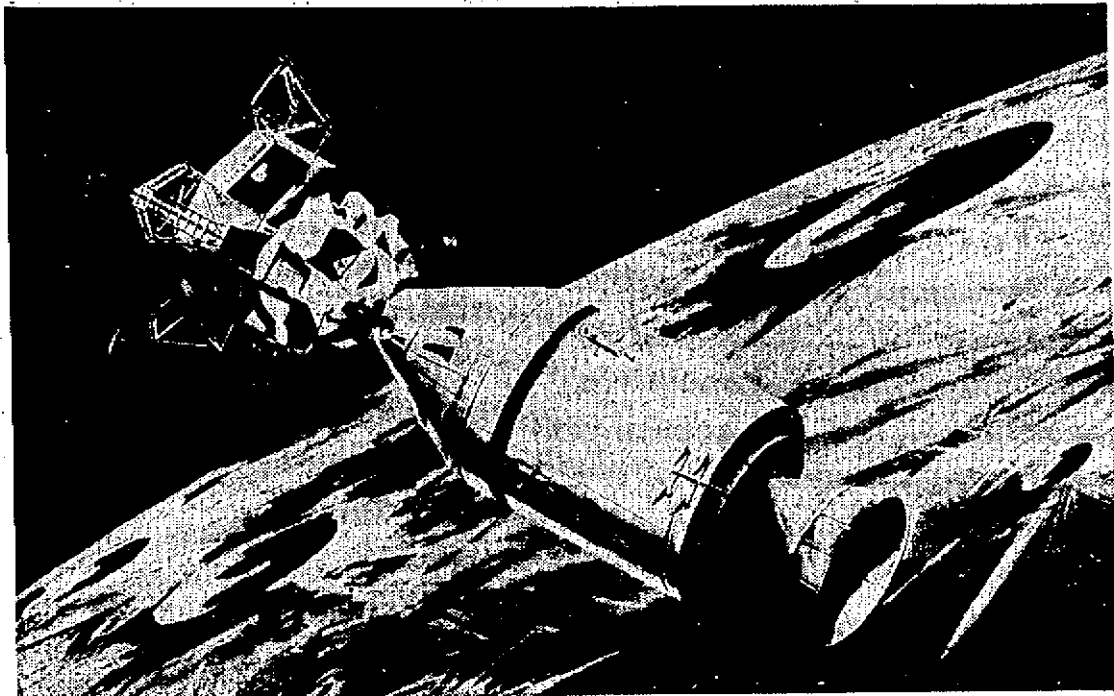

Heyerdahl said the papyrus boat might drift by itself to Bridgetown, Barbados, a British island 200 miles off northeast Venezuela that was his original destination.

Heyerdahl and his crew of six sailed from Morocco May 25, trying to prove Egyptians could have sailed to America in papyrus boats more than 4,000 years ago. The vessel was badly damaged by storms, but earlier Friday Heyerdahl had announced his intention to repair the Ra and continue the voyage, spending nights on the Shenandoah.

Water Ways

Q. What is the difference between distilled water and soft water? G.W., Long Beach.

A. Distilled water is water in which most of the impurities—chemicals and minerals—have been removed. Soft water is water in which the impurities have not been removed but have been altered, explained Dwight Chattaway, retail products manager for Arrowhead Puritas Water in Los Angeles. He pointed out that ordinary tap water has about 600 to 700 parts of impurities per million parts of water. But water which has been heated, changed into a vapor and then condensed—the distillation process—has about two parts of impurities per million parts of water. Distilled water has little or no taste, so companies inject it with ozone, a form of oxygen, to give it flavor. To make soft water, sodium is added to tap water to change the chemical composition of some of the impurities so that the water forms a lather with soap more easily.

"It's a big long chain that's got lots of links in it," he said. "I'd hate to pick one out and say this is the bad one. I don't know

Site of Suspected Red Offensive Hit

Combined News Services

SAIGON, — Saturday — Five flights of B-52s hammered Communist troop concentrations in Tay Ninh province Friday night and early today in the area where military sources expect the North Vietnamese to soon launch a new offensive. The Viet Cong in a broadcast on its clandestine liberation radios warned that the most fierce fighting of the war is yet to come. The warning was directed personally to Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, who began a four-day visit to the war zone Thursday. U.S. military spokesmen said the B-52 bombers dropped at least 450 tons of bombs. Three of the raids struck at suspected North Vietnamese positions around the base of "black Virgin" mountain, located about eight miles northeast of Tay Ninh City, the provincial capital 55 miles northwest of Saigon.

Thieu Warns Reds On Peace Offer Stall

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu called on the Communists today to accept his latest peace offer for Vietnam and warned "they have nothing to gain by waiting." Speaking at a news conference, Thieu reiterated his offer for free elections that would include the national liberation front and said this was a sign of good will, not weakness. Thieu was asked at the conference if he agreed with former Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford's proposal to withdraw 100,000 troops this year and all combat troops by the end of 1970. He replied that troop replacement would have to be gradual.

Cuba Plans Big Welcome for Russ Fleet

HAVANA — The Cuban government is preparing a massive welcome for the Soviet naval squadron due in Havana harbor Sunday morning. Thousands of Cubans are expected to line the seawall to greet the squadron, which will be the biggest show of Soviet muscle on this Communist island since the 1962 missile crisis. The eight-ship squadron will be the first Soviet naval force to visit Cuba. Observers in the U.S. say the dispatch of the ships was in reaction to President Nixon's plan to visit Communist Romania.

Nixon Plans Moon Talk Regardless of Hour

WASHINGTON — The White House announced Friday that President Nixon plans to talk with the Apollo 11 astronauts, regardless of the hour, as they explore the moon. The conversation will be nationally televised. Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary said Nixon would talk with the lunar explorers "on behalf of the American people." He will follow the mission Sunday and Monday from his office in the White House. Pictures of the President and the astronauts would appear side by side in a "split-screen" set up, or the President could be shown in the foreground with pictures from the moon projected on a large screen behind him. The arrangement would be decided by the commercial networks, Ziegler said.

Bitter Hospital Strike in Charleston Ends

CHARLESTON — A long and bitter strike at two Charleston Hospitals, that brought violence and an economic pinch to this port city, was settled Friday. Negro nonprofessional workers agreed to return to work at Charleston County Hospital. This followed by three weeks the settlement reached at the Medical University of South Carolina Hospital, where the walk-out began in March. The long dispute was marked by violence and demonstrations, some of the latter led by the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. He was jailed twice, the last time on charges of riot and inciting to riot.

The growth pushed the figure for the first half of 1969 to $732.6 billion against $672.2 billion for the first half of 1968. Knowles, whose appointment to the government's top health post was blocked by conservatives, called Friday for comprehensive health insurance for every American to be financed by a government trust fund. Knowles, testifying before a Senate subcommittee also urged the Nixon Administration to institute a health care program for expectant mothers and children.

Black Jobless Rate Up in Poor Areas

WASHINGTON — The unemployment rate for blacks is rising in poor neighborhoods but the rate for whites in the same areas is dropping, according to a government report. One congressman blamed the situation on racism. More than one in three black teenagers in poverty neighborhoods was unemployed in the second quarter of 1969, but only one in seven white teenagers in these neighborhoods was jobless. "It is strictly a result of color," Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., told UPI. "The unskilled, unemployed white man can compete more successfully against a black man."

Nixon Plans to Streamline the ICC

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, it was learned Friday, is planning to use his executive reorganization power to streamline the Interstate Commerce Commission, a longtime target of critics who say the 82-year-old agency is too hidebound to be effective. According to industry sources, Nixon plans to trim the commission from 11 to seven members by simply not reappointing new members as old terms expire. The next step would be to end allowing the commission members to elect the chairman. Under the Nixon plan, the president would appoint the chairman. The ICC has come in for its sharpest punishment in its handling of railroad mergers and train discount inuances, two areas which fall under its regulation.

Ammonia Fumes Force Evacuation of 200

GLOUCESTER — About 200 persons were evacuated from their homes and business places Friday when a cooling system line ruptured at an ice plant, allowing 6,000 pounds of ammonia to escape. Five persons, including two firemen, suffered chemical burns. The ammonia escaped as workmen sought to repair a faulty valve.

A blonde, a raven brunette, and a boyish cut tending to gray — three heads as pretty as a picture — posed for the news photographers Friday. Then the Apollo 11 wives shared ham, roast beef, slaw, and potato salad across a redwood picnic table. Joan Archer Aldrin, the hostess at her Nassau Bay home to a box luncheon beside her backyard swimming pool, apologized to the photographers at the end of the five-minute picture session for making them wait an hour in 94-degree heat. "We just got mixed up in invitations," she said.

The blonde amateur actress wore a green smock and was barelegged and barefoot. The three wives had donned shifts over swim suits preparatory to an afternoon in the pool. Mrs. Jan Armstrong, wife of the commander of Apollo 11, drove the 10 miles from her El Lago home to Nassau Bay with her sons Ricky, 11, and Mark, 6, and her sister, Mrs. Carolyn Trude of Barrington Hills, Ill.

Pat Collins, wife of command module pilot Mike Collins, was driven the four blocks from her Nassau Bay home by her sister, Mrs. Bernard Golder of Boston. Mrs. Collins, a deeply tanned, beauty with black hair, was asked if she were as confident now of the success of the moon mission as she had been at launch time. "Even a little more so," she replied. "Feeling better?" "Feeling fine," she said, entering the home of lunar module pilot Edwin E. Aldrin carrying her contribution of potato salad.

Sharing in the lunch were the three Aldrin children, Michael, 13, Janice, who will be 12 next month, and Andrew, 11; and Aldrin's maternal uncle, Robert Moon, and Mrs. Moon of Arcadia, Calif.

WALLACE

Former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace said Friday he was "not overly critical" of the Nixon Administration, although there were "some things" about it he did not like. Wallace said he had no specific plans to run again for the presidency or for governor. He said his decision would rest on the administration's record. He said he would not run "if we have restoration of law and order, meaningful tax relief, return the control of local institutions to the localities, and an honorable solution to the war in Vietnam."

ALASKA POST

Former Mayor George Sharrock of Anchorage has been named to the $30,000-a-year Alaskan development post President Nixon's brother turned down "for personal reasons." The Department of Commerce announced last April Edward C. Nixon had been appointed chairman of the Federal Field Committee for Development Planning in Alaska. But four days later the President's youngest brother, said he would be unable to accept the post. Sharrock, 59, is a former Alaska commerce commissioner and a native of Ohio.

GINZBURG LOSES

A $75,000 libel judgment against publisher Ralph Ginzburg and his Fact magazine was upheld Friday by a federal appeals court, which ruled that he defamed Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., and did so with malice. "The appellants were motivated by actual malice when they published these defamatory statements," a three-man 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals held. "Naturally, we'll appeal this to the Supreme Court," Ginzburg said in a statement.

FRANCO FETE

Gen. Francisco Franco celebrated the 33rd anniversary of the start of the Spanish civil war Friday night in an 18th century palace with his annual reception for the diplomatic corps, and high government, church and military officials. La Granja, built by Philip V as a little Versailles, was the birthplace of the pretender Don Juan. Gen. Franco and his wife shook hands with the 300 guests and watched Spanish folk dancing and singing.

TERESA HONORED

St. Teresa of Avila has become the first woman to qualify for the title of "doctor of the church," one of the most distinguished honors in the Roman Catholic church, Vatican City sources reported Friday. The title is reserved for the greatest teachers of Catholic doctrine who at the same time are outstanding for the holiness of their lives. Only 30 Catholics, all men, have been proclaimed doctors in the nearly 2,000-year history of the church. St. Teresa, a 16th century Spanish nun, is a patron saint of Spain.

Site of Suspected Red Offensive Hit

Combined News Services

SAIGON, — Saturday — Five flights of B-52s hammered Communist troop concentrations in Tay Ninh province Friday night and early today in the area where military sources expect the North Vietnamese to soon launch a new offensive. The Viet Cong in a broadcast on its clandestine liberation radios warned that the most fierce fighting of the war is yet to come. The warning was directed personally to Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, who began a four-day visit to the war zone Thursday. U.S. military spokesmen said the B-52 bombers dropped at least 450 tons of bombs. Three of the raids struck at suspected North Vietnamese positions around the base of "black Virgin" mountain, located about eight miles northeast of Tay Ninh City, the provincial capital 55 miles northwest of Saigon.

Thieu Warns Reds On Peace Offer Stall

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu called on the Communists today to accept his latest peace offer for Vietnam and warned "they have nothing to gain by waiting." Speaking at a news conference, Thieu reiterated his offer for free elections that would include the national liberation front and said this was a sign of good will, not weakness. Thieu was asked at the conference if he agreed with former Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford's proposal to withdraw 100,000 troops this year and all combat troops by the end of 1970. He replied that troop replacement would have to be gradual.

Cuba Plans Big Welcome for Russ Fleet

HAVANA — The Cuban government is preparing a massive welcome for the Soviet naval squadron due in Havana harbor Sunday morning. Thousands of Cubans are expected to line the seawall to greet the squadron, which will be the biggest show of Soviet muscle on this Communist island since the 1962 missile crisis. The eight-ship squadron will be the first Soviet naval force to visit Cuba. Observers in the U.S. say the dispatch of the ships was in reaction to President Nixon's plan to visit Communist Romania.

19 Children Drown in Loire River

ANGERS — Nineteen children drowned Friday while bathing in the treacherous Loire river. Police said the riverbed gave way under the children's feet and they were swept into the water. By sundown 10 bodies had been recovered and police said there was no hope of finding the other nine alive. Scores of weeping parents lined the riverbank. The children, aged 13 and 14, were part of a group of 60 taken on a one-day bus outing from a local recreation center.

Red Guard Gangs Battle in Shanghai

HONG KONG — Bands of rival Red Guards are fighting each other in Communist China's biggest metropolis, Shanghai, and 600,000 jobless youths are roaming the city's streets, Chinese travelers reported Friday. Reports said the Red Guards in Shanghai recently resumed activities after they were declared illegal and went underground last fall. They said some of the roaming youths are from Chekiang Province, but they and the local youths are causing trouble, robbing people and fighting in the streets.

Bandits Get $300,000 in London Holdup

LONDON — Eight bandits disguised as bank guards robbed an armored car of more than $300,000 Friday and escaped in a van painted to look like a dry-cleaning truck. The thieves forced one security man into the truck, a money bag chained to his wrist, and drove away with his legs dangling out the open rear door. A teen-aged boy and a 65-year-old grandfather both gave chase. The grandfather tackled one of the robbers and retrieved one moneybag.

Peking Area Jarred by Earthquake

HONG KONG — A major earthquake was recorded Friday in the vicinity of Peking, capital of Communist China. The Royal Observatory of Hong Kong, one of numerous seismographic stations throughout the world that reported it, said the quake registered 7.3 on the Richter scale. It said the epicenter was in the Po Hai Sea, about 100 miles southeast of Peking.

Nixon Plans Moon Talk Regardless of Hour

WASHINGTON — The White House announced Friday that President Nixon plans to talk with the Apollo 11 astronauts, regardless of the hour, as they explore the moon. The conversation will be nationally televised. Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary said Nixon would talk with the lunar explorers "on behalf of the American people." He will follow the mission Sunday and Monday from his office in the White House. Pictures of the President and the astronauts would appear side by side in a "split-screen" set up, or the President could be shown in the foreground with pictures from the moon projected on a large screen behind him. The arrangement would be decided by the commercial networks, Ziegler said.

Bitter Hospital Strike in Charleston Ends

CHARLESTON — A long and bitter strike at two Charleston Hospitals, that brought violence and an economic pinch to this port city, was settled Friday. Negro nonprofessional workers agreed to return to work at Charleston County Hospital. This followed by three weeks the settlement reached at the Medical University of South Carolina Hospital, where the walk-out began in March. The long dispute was marked by violence and demonstrations, some of the latter led by the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. He was jailed twice, the last time on charge of riot and inciting to riot.

Personal Income Up $5.9 Billion in June

WASHINGTON — Personal income rose $5.9 billion in June, spurred by a $4.1 billion increase in wages and salaries, the Commerce Department reported today. The growth pushed the figure for the first half of 1969 to $732.6 billion against $672.2 billion for the first half of 1968. The June figure, seasonally adjusted, was $746.2 billion, up from $740.3 billion in May. Except for March, when the increase was $6.8 billion, the June increase was the highest of the year.

Tunney Urges War on Border Drug Traffic

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Rep. John V. Tunney, D-Riverside, Friday proposed bonded drug shipments, a beefed-up Border Patrol, better in-school training, and research for a sophisticated detection system as measures to stem "the unique and incredibly serious problem" of Mexican border narcotics traffic.

Spending a day in the Long Beach area as part of his statewide mission to decide whether to run for the U.S. Senate in 1970, challenging incumbent Republican George

JOHN V. TUNNEY
"Border Problem Unique"

Murphy, Tunney also discussed his opposition to deployment of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system. The 35-year-old son of former boxing champion Gene Tunney, the congressman told about 50 at a Golden Sails Inn breakfast that border checks last year, of only 1.5 per cent of automobiles, uncovered more than $1-million worth of heroin, more than five million dangerous drug tablets and massive quantities of marijuana.

American manufacturers ship dangerous drugs to San Ysidro, consigned to a Mexican "pharmacist," who may or may not be a pharmacist. The consignee picks up the shipment and somehow his goods become part of the illicit drug traffic. More than half the smuggled narcotics uncovered is manufactured in the United States, Tunney said.

HE SAID the American shipments sent to Mexican purchasers could fill the needs of the entire country of Mexico for 50 years. Legislation, authored by Tunney, has been introduced to require pharmaceutical companies to ship such drugs in bond.

He noted testimony of a Mexican official at hearings Tunney conducted in San Diego last week to the effect that "it isn't our people who buy those drugs. It's you affluent Americans. If you didn't purchase them there'd be no trouble."

Tunney said so-called dangerous drugs, which some claim are less dangerous than heroin and other hard narcotics, may actually be more dangerous. One who has built a gradual tolerance to 20 second sleeping pills a day will die if he's cut off, he said. That is not true for heroin, he said.

TUNNEY advocated a year's research and development to try to perfect some mechanical, chemical or electronic system to detect hidden drugs. He said an airline stewardess could bring in one packet of heroin from some overseas flight that might be worth $20,000. With such "incredible money to be made" in the traffic, he said, it would be almost impossible to stop without some sophisticated form of detection.

At Long Beach City College, Tunney said the ABM issue may be decided by one or two votes in the Senate but predicted once passed there would win 2-1 in the House. His vote will be against it, he said.

THE PROPOSED system, he said, would protect two missile wings — about 370 missiles and no people. Recent-year contracts run always at least 100 per cent above estimates, placing the cost of this system at $12 or $13 billion. To protect 20 or 30 cities the system would cost a minimum of $60 billion, probably closer to $100 billion. To effectively protect 80 to 90 per cent of the population, the cost would go to $300 or $400 billion, he said.

At least half the scientific community says it won't work, Tunney said, they contending it would be like computerizing all airplane traffic in the United States and then, one day, eliminating all air traffic controllers and pushing a button to put the whole thing on automatic computer. "Would you want to be one of those in the air on that first day?"

Tunney, speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Third Friday Forum in Lakewood Country Club, expressed mock disappointment that President Nixon was getting credit for initiating a moon holiday Monday. Legislation proposing a new national holiday, Space Exploration Day, was initiated by Tunney July 8.

Noguchi Hearing Reopening Urged

Civil service hearings should be reopened to give ousted County Coroner Thomas T. Noguchi a chance to testify in his own behalf, Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said Friday.

Hahn voiced concern the "whole truth" has failed to come out of the marathon hearing in which Noguchi sought reinstatement in his job.

NOGUCHI'S attorney, Godfrey Isaac, decided to test his case without putting the 42-year-old pathologist on the stand.

As a result, Hahn said, "Dr. Noguchi was never permitted to either affirm or deny the charges made by Lindon S. Hollinger, county chief administrative officer."

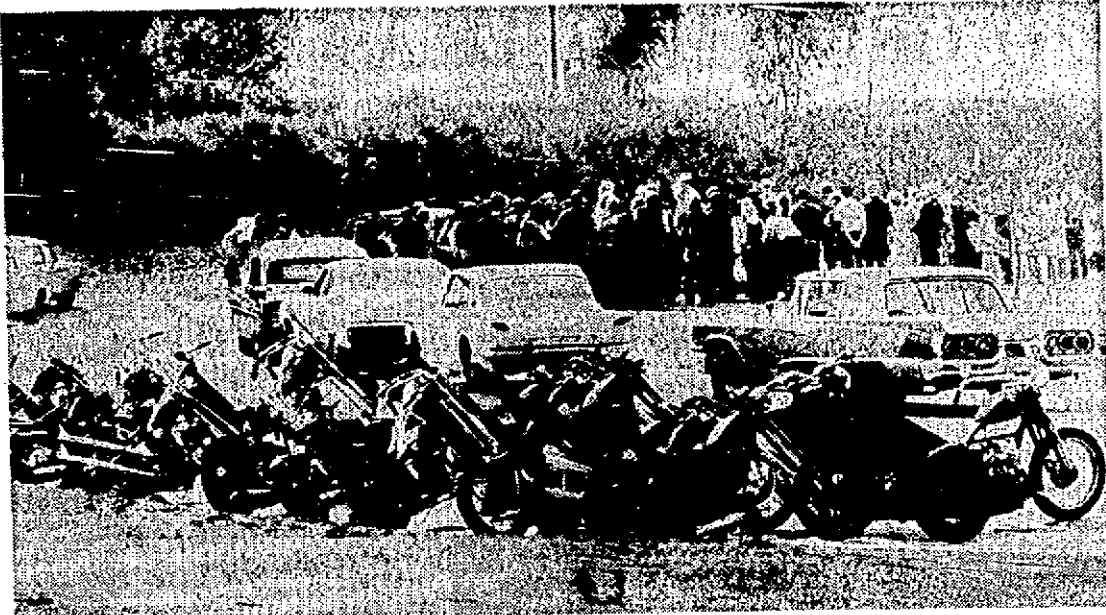

It was Hollinger's charges which led Supervisors to dismiss Dr. Noguchi March 18. Hahn said so far the unprecedented Noguchi case has cost the county almost $50,000, making it the most expensive civil service appeal in county history. "Yet there is still confusion and a cloud over the hearing," Hahn added.

THE COMMISSION took the case under submission in late June and Board President O. Richard Capen said Monday the three commissioners are still studying the 6,000 page transcript on the six-week hearing.

"It appears, so far, that the whole truth has not come out of the hearing and that is why a large segment of the Japanese-American community is disturbed," Hahn said.

Supervisors received a 7,000-name petition last Tuesday from an organization known as Japanese-Americans United In Their Search for Truth (JUST), which called for an "unbiased" decision in the case.

CYCLE CLUBBERS SILENCE ENGINES TO BURY BUDDY

Last Sunday night, Thomas Blaisdell, 29, of El Monte, lost a drag race—and his life—on a Long Beach street. Friday, motorcycle-riding buddies of Blaisdell parked their "hogs" at Whittier's Rose Hills Memorial Park (above) and paid final homage to one of their number who will no longer be riding with them. Absent from the group above was Blaisdell's passenger on the fatal ride, Ronald Leslie, 28, of 6531 Abbott Drive, Huntington Park. He suffered numerous injuries and remains in serious condition at Harbor General Hospital.

Chemical Tank Spills in Carson

A tank containing 4,000 gallons of paint additive collapsed Friday in Carson, spilling the noxious liquid between two buildings and overcoming a workman and county fireman who inhaled the fumes.

The chemical which spilled at the Mor-Glo Tank Corp., 18937 Main St., Carson, also forced nearly 50 workers to evacuate their offices.

An employee of Mor-Glo, of Torrance, and county fireman Robert D. Bertram were both overcome when they inhaled the methylene chloride fumes.

Both were treated at Gardena Memorial Hospital.

TORRANCE MAN CHOKED ON FOOD

Guy Rockefeller, 36-year-old truck driver found dead in Torrance, choked to death on food he ate shortly before his body was discovered, according to an autopsy performed Friday.

Torrance detectives said county medical examiners were continuing to check the cause of abrasions on the victim's head.

Death Ordered for Slayer

BAKERSFIELD, (AP) — Richard Welch, 27-year-old Texan was sentenced Friday to death in the gas chamber in the shooting death of a teenaged hitchhiker.

An eight-woman, four-man jury, the same one that convicted him of first-degree murder, announced the death penalty after 14 hours of deliberation.

Beverly Hills Mansion Hides Wanted Panther

By BILL GAGNON
Staff Writer

A suspected cop-killer — sought as a fugitive for more than a month — was nabbed by police and FBI agents, Friday, hiding out in a plush Beverly Hills mansion.

Black Panther Arthur Dewitt League, 20, had been sought on a murder warrant charging him with the June 4 slaying of Santa Ana Police Officer Nelson Sasser.

Sasser, named 1968 "Rookie of the Year," was gunned down in the street without warning when he got out of his patrol car to question three suspicious persons, investigators said.

WITH LEAGUE when authorities entered the palatial hideout was another Black Panther member, Nathaniel G. Grimes, 21.

Wesley G. Grapp, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles FBI office, said Grimes also was arrested and charged under federal statutes with harboring a fugitive. He is being held in Los Angeles County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Had Posh Hideout

Both League and Grimes were indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury last month on murder charges, along with a third Black Panther, Daniel M.

Lynem, 21. Charges against Grimes and Lynem, however, later were dropped.

Following arraignment before the U.S. commissioner in Los Angeles on a federal unlawful flight to avoid prosecution charge, late Friday, League was turned over to Santa Ana authorities to face charges in connection with Officer Sasser's death.

Orange County District Attorney Cecil Hicks said League will be arraigned in Superior Court Tuesday, on dual charges of murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

GRIMES FACES up to five years in prison if convicted of the harboring of a fugitive charge.

Grapp said the hideout mansion — with a large swimming pool and fancy guest cottages on the grounds — is owned by actor-producer-director, Donald Sutherland who, with his wife, Shirley, is reported to be in England.

A maid was the only other person in the mansion when authorities entered and arrested League and Grimes without incident, Grapp added.

Jury Foreman Quits, Some Dissention Hinted

Foreman William D. Martin of the Orange County Grand Jury resigned Friday and Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Robert Gardner said he will appoint a new foreman Wednesday.

The sudden resignation caught officials by surprise and caused speculation over the reason.

It was known Martin was at odds with several grand jurors who pleaded for more aggressive investigations into county departments and affairs.

Martin had to sign — over his objections — a resolution censuring the board of supervisors for the proposed land exchange in Upper Newport Bay.

It became highly controversial and will be considered by the Superior Court in a test case.

Although Martin had difficulties over other matters, the Upper Bay agreement between the county and Irvine Company decided his resignation, it was learned.

Officials Probing Crash that Killed Lakewood Pilot

Investigators today are probing the crash of a twin-engine plane which hit a three-story-high memorial for lost pilots in Burbank's Valhalla Memorial Park and killed the Lakewood pilot and one passenger.

The third victim, a 19-year-old Los Alamitos youth, was in satisfactory condition after the messenger service plane wobbled into the "Portal of the Fallen Wings Memorial" and slipped to the ground Friday.

National Transportation Safety Board said the Navajo Piper — which lifted off erratically at the nearby Hollywood-Burbank Airport about 6:30 a.m. — lost power, clipped a pine tree and slammed into the memorial.

CAUSE OF THE crash is still unknown, investigators said.

Killed were pilot Charles A. Burns, 27, of 6033 E. Eberle St., Lakewood, who was flying for United Clearings Inc.

The dead passenger was identified as Eugene Bain, 38, an off-duty Fresno policeman.

The third man, Dale Black, 19, of 12102 Chianti Drive, Los Alamitos, was treated for multiple fractures at St. Joseph Hospital in Burbank.

The plane struck a dome atop the memorial to lost pioneer aviators. Valhalla Park spokesman said damage to the shrine was minor. Several mosaic figures and tile were jarred loose, they said.

Plane wreckage was strewn over a wide section of a cemetery around the memorial but there was no fire.

Bain was found, still strapped to his seat, in a clump of bushes in the cemetery. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Trio is Sent for Trial in Beach Robbery

Three men indicted on robbery charges in the June 5 looting of a restaurant lost dismissal pleas and were ordered to trial Aug. 20 in Santa Ana Superior Court.

Anthony Umberto Rossi, 33, of South Laguna, is held under $75,000 bond, and John G. Pizzola, 46, of Las Vegas, is in jail under $50,000 bond demanded by Judge Howard Cameron.

The court released Henry William Wilming, 30, of Costa Mesa, in $1,000 bail.

Wilming, bartender at Berkshire Restaurant in Newport Beach, reportedly "set up" the robbery, in which $4,700 was taken from the safe.

The Orange County Grand Jury indicted the three June 25.

Tunney Urges War on Border Drug Traffic

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Rep. John V. Tunney, D-Riverside, Friday proposed bonded drug shipments, a beefed-up Border Patrol, better in-school training, and research for a sophisticated detection system as measures to stem "the unique and incredibly serious problem" of Mexican border narcotics traffic.

Spending a day in the Long Beach area as part of his statewide mission to decide whether to run for the U.S. Senate in 1970, challenging incumbent Republican George

JOHN V. TUNNEY
"Border Problem Unique"

Murphy, Tunney also discussed his opposition to deployment of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system. The 35-year-old son of former boxing champion Gene Tunney, the congressman told about 50 at a Golden Sails Inn breakfast that border checks last year, of only 1.5 per cent of automobiles, uncovered more than $1-million worth of heroin, more than five million dangerous drug tablets and massive quantities of marijuana.

American manufacturers ship dangerous drugs to San Ysidro, consigned to a Mexican "pharmacist," who may or may not be a pharmacist. The consignee picks up the shipment and somehow his goods become part of the illicit drug traffic. More than half the smuggled narcotics uncovered in manufacturing in the United States, Tunney said.

HE SAID the American shipments sent to Mexican purchasers could fill the needs of the entire country of Mexico for 50 years. Legislation, authored by Tunney, has been introduced to require pharmaceutical companies to ship such drugs in bond.

He noted testimony of a Mexican official at hearings Tunney conducted in San Diego last week to the effect that "It isn't our people who buy those drugs. It's you affluent Americans. If you didn't purchase them there'd be no trouble."

Tunney said so-called dangerous drugs, which some claim are less dangerous than heroin and other hard narcotics, may actually be more dangerous. One who has built a gradual tolerance to 20 second sleeping pills a day will die if he's cut off, he said. That is not true for heroin, he said.

TUNNEY advocated a year's research and development to try to perfect some mechanical, chemical or electronic system to detect hidden drugs. He said an airline stewardess could bring in one packet of heroin from some overseas flight that might be worth $20,000. With such "incredible money to be made" in the traffic, he said, it would be almost impossible to stop without some sophisticated form of detection.

At Long Beach City College, Tunney said the ABM issue may be decided by one or two votes in the Senate but predicted once passed there it would win 2-1 in the House. His vote will be against it, he said.

THE PROPOSED system, he said, would protect two missile wings — about 370 missiles and no people. Recent-year contracts run always at least 100 per cent above estimates, placing the cost of this system at $12 or $13 billion. To protect 20 or 30 cities the system would cost a minimum of $60 billion, probably closer to $100 billion. To effectively protect 80 to 90 per cent of the population, the cost would go to $300 or $400 billion, he said.

At least half the scientific community says it won't work, Tunney said, they contending it would be like computerizing all airplane traffic in the United States and then, one day, eliminating all air traffic controllers and pushing a button to put the whole thing on automatic computer. "Would you want to be one of those in the air on that first day?"

Tunney, speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Third Friday Forum in Lakewood Country Club, expressed mock disappointment that President Nixon was getting credit for initiating a moon holiday Monday. Legislation proposing a new national holiday, Space Exploration Day, was initiated by Tunney July 8.

Noguchi Hearing Reopening Urged

Civil service hearings should be reopened to give ousted County Coroner Thomas T. Noguchi a chance to testify in his own behalf, Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said Friday.

Hahn voiced concern the "whole truth" has failed to come out of the marathon hearing in which Noguchi sought reinstatement in his job.

NOGUCHI'S attorney, Godfrey Isaac, decided to rest his case without putting the 42-year-old pathologist on the stand.

As a result, Hahn said, "Dr. Noguchi was never permitted to either affirm or deny the charges made by Landon S. Hollinger, county chief administrative officer."

It was Hollinger's charges which led Supervisors to dismiss Dr. Noguchi March 18.

Hahn said so far the unprecedented Noguchi case has cost the county almost $50,000, making it the most expensive civil service appeal in county history.

"Yet there is still confusion and a cloud over the hearing," Hahn added.

THE COMMISSION took the case under submission in late June and Board President O. Richard Capen said Monday the three commissioners are still studying the 6,000 page transcript on the six-week hearing.

"It appears, so far, that the whole truth has not come out of the hearing and that is why a large segment of the Japanese-American community is disturbed," Hahn said.

Supervisors received a 7,000-name petition last Tuesday from an organization known as Japanese-Americans United In Their Search for Truth (JUST), which called for an "unbiased" decision in the case.

'CYCLE CLUBBERS SILENCE ENGINES TO BURY BUDDY

Last Sunday night, Thomas Blaisdell, 29, of El Monte, lost a drag race—and his life—on a Long Beach street. Friday, motorcycle-riding buddies of Blaisdell parked their "hogs" at Whittier's Rose Hills Memorial Park (above) and paid final homage to one of their number who will no longer be riding with them. Absent from the group above was Blaisdell's passenger on the fatal ride, Ronald Leslie, 28, of 6531 Abbott Drive, Huntington Park. He suffered numerous injuries and remains in serious condition at Harbor General Hospital.

Chemical Tank Spills in Carson

A tank containing 4,000 gallons of paint additive collapsed Friday in Carson, spilling the noxious liquid between two buildings and overcoming a workman and county fireman who inhaled the fumes.

The chemical which spilled at the Mor-Glo Tank Corp., 18937 Main St., Carson, also forced nearly 50 workers to evacuate their offices.

An employee of Horatio Ermus, of Torrance, and county fireman Robert D. Bertram were both overcome when they inhaled the methylene chloride fumes.

Both were treated at Gardena Memorial Hospital.

TORRANCE MAN CHOKED ON FOOD

Guy Rockefeller, 36-year-old truck driver found dead in Torrance, choked to death on food he ate shortly before his body was discovered, according to an autopsy performed Friday.

Torrance detectives said county medical examiners were continuing to check the cause of abrasions on the victim's head.

Death Ordered for Slayer

BAKERSFIELD, (AP) — Richard Welch, 27-year-old Texan was sentenced Friday to death in the gas chamber in the shooting death of a teenaged hitchhiker.

An eight-woman, four-man jury, the same one that convicted him of first-degree murder, announced the death penalty after 14 hours of deliberation.

Beverly Hills Mansion Hides Wanted Panther

By BILL GAGNON
Staff Writer

A suspected cop-killer — sought as a fugitive for more than a month — was nabbed by police and FBI agents, Friday, hiding out in a plush Beverly Hills mansion.

Black Panther Arthur Dewitt League, 20, had been sought on a murder warrant charging him with the June 4 slaying of Santa Ana Police Officer Nelson Sasser.

Sasser, named 1968 "Rookie of the Year," was gunned down in the street without warning when he got out of his patrol car to question three suspicious persons, investigators said.

WITH LEAGUE when authorities entered the palatial hideout was another Black Panther member, Nathaniel G. Grimes, 21.

Wesley G. Grapp, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles FBI office, said Grimes also was arrested and charged under federal statutes with harboring a fugitive. He is being held in Los Angeles County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Both League and Grimes were indicted by the Orange County Grand Jury last month on murder charges, along with a third Black Panther, Daniel M.

Lyne, 21. Charges against Grimes and Lyne, however, later were dropped.

Following arraignment before the U.S. commissioner in Los Angeles on a federal unlawful flight to avoid prosecution charge, late Friday, League was turned over to Santa Ana authorities to face charges in connection with Officer Sasser's death.

Orange County District Attorney Cecil Hicks said League will be arraigned in Superior Court Tuesday, on dual charges of murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

GRIMES FACES up to five years in prison if convicted of the harboring of a fugitive charge.

Grapp said the hideout mansion — with a large swimming pool and fancy guest cottages on the grounds — is owned by actor-producer-director, Donald Sutherland who, with his wife, Shirley, is reported to be in England.

A maid was the only other person in the mansion when authorities entered and arrested League and Grimes without incident, Grapp added.

Jury Foreman Quits, Some Dissention Hinted

Foreman William D. Martin of the Orange County Grand Jury resigned Friday and Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Robert Gardner said he will appoint a new foreman Wednesday.

The sudden resignation caught officials by surprise and caused speculation over the reason.

It was known Martin was at odds with several grand jurors who pleaded for more aggressive investigations into county departments and affairs.

Martin had to sign — over his objections — a resolution censuring the board of supervisors for the proposed land exchange in Upper Newport Bay.

It became highly controversial and will be considered by the Superior Court in a test case.

Although Martin had difficulties over other matters, the Upper Bay agreement between the county and Irvine Company decided his resignation, it was learned.

DESCENT ORBIT, MODULE ASCENT . . . RENDEZVOUS

ROCKETS

what the bad one is — I hope there are no bad ones."

The critical period of Apollo 11's landing mission begins before noon today with what planners call the lunar orbit insertion burn. The rocket fires for 5 minutes 59.9 seconds while the spacecraft is out of communication with the Earth behind the moon and slows the craft almost 2,000 miles per hour.

"What we do here is brake into an orbit about the moon," said Ron Berry, chief of the lunar mission analysis branch of the space agency said recently.

TWO REVOLUTIONS later the astronauts fire the rocket again to "tune up the exact orbit we want to use as a base for LM operations," Berry said. That firing comes at 2:42 p.m., lasts 16.4 seconds and slows the spacecraft about 108 miles an hour.

Apollo 8 and 10, the two prior moon missions, were put into a 69 mile circular orbit. On Apollo 11, it's 62 by 76 miles to compensate for the uneven influence of the moon's gravity on the orbit.

By the time Eagle is ready to dock again with the command ship, the moon's gravity will have made that orbit circular.

"IT DOESN'T matter that much I suppose," said Jim McPherson, chief of the math-physics branch of the mission planning and analysis department.

"We're just getting cocky and we're going to tune it up real finely on Apollo 11 — that's about all you can say."

Both Apollo 8 and 10 performed similar rocket firings.

Sunday, at 12:11 p.m., Armstrong and Aldrin fire the moon lander's descent engine for 28 seconds, slowing the spacecraft about 50 miles per hour and starting the long descent to landing. This, too, has been done before on Apollo 10.

BERRY SAID the powered descent — the actual landing approach — begins with another rocket firing in the 50,000 foot orbit.

That rocket firing lasts 11 minutes 52 seconds and changes the lander's speed by 4,650 miles an hour leading — if all goes as planned — to a landing on the surface of the moon at 1:19 p.m.

While the work on the moon's surface is the most spectacular portion of the mission, there are two critical rocket firings left — one to get Armstrong and Aldrin off the moon and another to get the reassembled crew home.

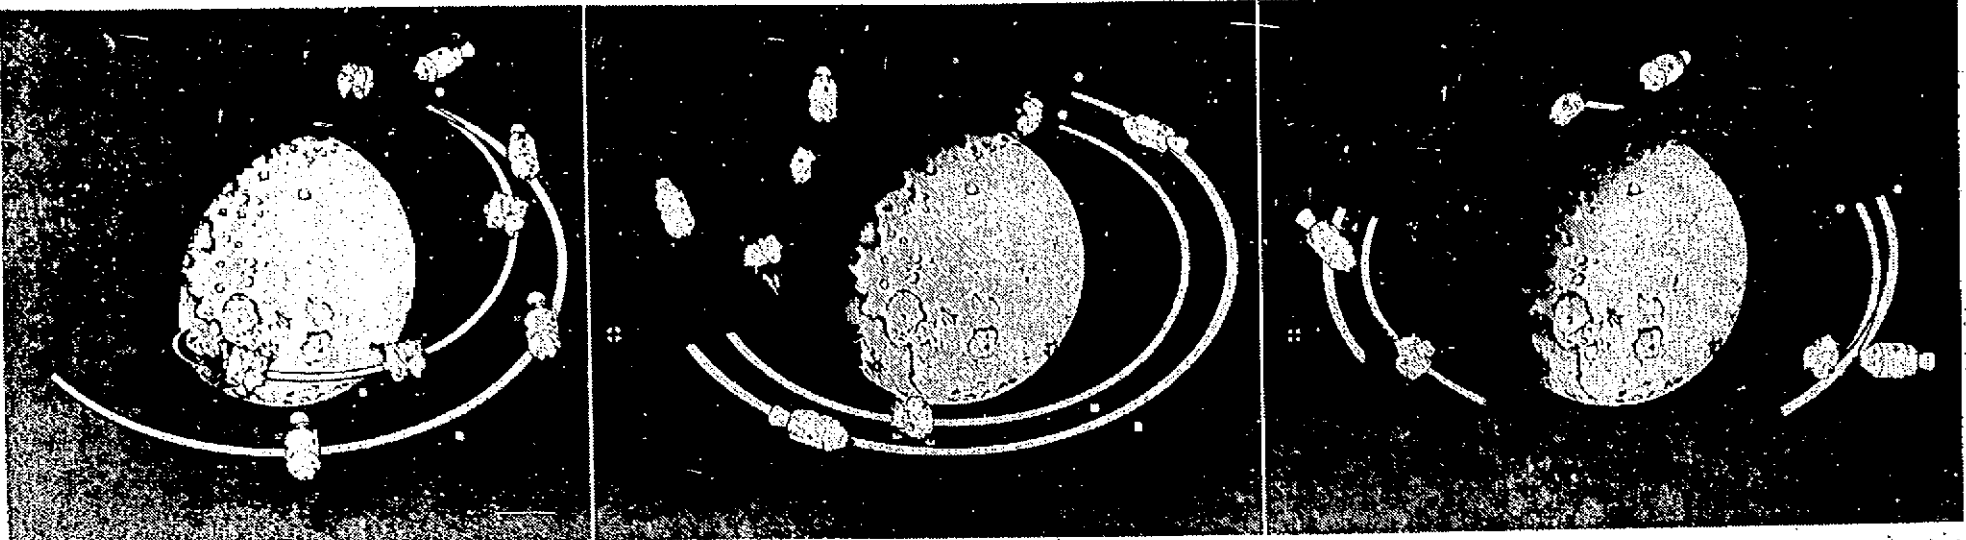

THE FIRST firing comes at 10:15 a.m. Monday when the astronauts trigger the moon lander's ascent engine for 7 minutes, 23 seconds to get back into moon orbit. This has never been done in space. Its importance to the success and safety of the flight is obvious.

After a series of maneuvers to set up and complete the rendezvous and docking, the astronauts start home. At 9:57 a.m., at the end of 30 revolutions in moon orbit, they fire the Apollo command ship's big rocket for 2 minutes, 29 seconds behind the moon to break away and head for Earth.

RADIATION DANGER NIL —VAN ALLEN

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Dr. James Van Allen, University of Iowa physicist who discovered the radiation belts around Earth, says the chances are "perhaps one in 300" that the Apollo 11 astronauts will encounter dangerous radiation from the sun.

But Van Allen said that had the moon-bound astronauts been in space during one, four-day period of heavy radiation in late 1960, they would have received a "medically significant" dose of radiation despite the shielding of their spacecraft.

THREE PHASES OF MOON LANDING are shown in artist's concept. At left, the lunar module containing Neil Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. separates from the command module and descends to the moon's surface while the command module with Michael Collins continues to orbit. The lower portion of the lunar module will remain on the moon. Center, the ascent module blasts off from the moon to rendezvous with the command module. Its smaller orbit allows it to catch up with the command module. At right, the orbits are matched and the ascent module docks with the command module so Armstrong and Aldrin can join Collins in the command module. The ascent module will then be jettisoned as will the ascent after the astronauts are safe in the command module. Arrow and circle cross indicate Earth's tangent.

No Rescue if Vehicle Fails Astronauts

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

SPACE CENTER, Houston (U) — Death awaits the Apollo astronauts if they become marooned on the moon — and they know it.

For there is no rescue vehicle that could save them.

Even if another spacecraft were poised on the Cape Kennedy launch pad, it would take four days to reach the moon. Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., will land with only a 43-hour supply of oxygen.

If, in landing, their lunar module becomes tilted more than 35 degrees, they cannot fire their ascent engine to rejoin the command ship orbiting above them. The trajectory would not be right. And they have no tools to set the LM upright. Even on the moon, the LM weighs 15,000 pounds, too heavy for men in bulky space suits to shove around.

The command ship, piloted by Michael Collins, could not come down, pick them up, and blast off again. It has neither the rocket engines nor guidance equipment to do so.

Were another Apollo spacecraft already in moon orbit, or near it, its LM with two men aboard couldn't pick up the castaways. There isn't room in the LM for more than two men.

The assurance going for

Armstrong and Aldrin is that "engineering talent has been concentrated on reliability and basic designs," says Christopher C. Kraft Jr., director of flight operations.

A rescue vehicle would cost several times more than the Apollo spacecraft and it would have to have far more intricate flight capabilities, Kraft explained.

Practically every system involved for crew safety has a backup system in case the primary one fails, he says. This includes such things as electrical and cooling systems, the gyroscopes and computer, engine pressure valves and regulators.

In ordinary airplane flight, the greatest dangers come at take-off and landing. And the launching of a highly volatile Saturn rocket is incredibly risky, Kraft admits.

But of Apollo's safety, he said, "I suspect it is as safe as a transport plane flight, certainly if you don't include the landings and take-offs. Take out the launching, and reliability numbers are very high."

The reason the Apollo flights cost so much is "the reliability of the hardware" with all of its many thousands of parts, Kraft says.

"You can get a good tape recorder at a store for $100. In a space vehicle 20 of them might cost $1 million. You must be sure that when a device is supposed to run for 14 hours, it will, and that it will stand up against heat, vibrations, salt spray and exposure to oxygen under pressure. This helps explain why what we build is reliable. A phenomenal amount of testing and paper work is involved to prove it all works."

The demand for reliability is, for Armstrong and Aldrin, an all or nothing affair.

Robot Lens to Telecast Moon Step

SPACE CENTER, Houston (U) — An automatic camera, specially built to move into place and focus on the correct spot without guidance of a cameraman, will relay to earth live television picture of man's first step on the moon.

The camera is attached to a bench that is folded into the lunar module landing vehicle. As Neil A. Armstrong, the first man out of the moon lander, goes down the ladder to the surface he will pull a ring. It operates the mechanism that lowers the work bench, turns on the camera and focuses it on the foot of the ladder.

Electronic signals that are the television picture are sent back to earth from the spacecraft antenna.

TECHNICIANS, because of spacing problems, had to mount the camera upside down on the work bench, and the original transmission will appear that way. But before the picture reaches home viewers around the world it will be inverted so that Armstrong will be shown right side up.

Armstrong will lift the television camera from the work bench about 40 minutes after he steps on the moon, set it up about 30 feet away on a tripod. From there, the camera will scan most of the activities Armstrong and Air Force Col. Edwin E. Aldrin will perform on the moon for the following two hours.

Armstrong said this will include a view of his planting the American flag on the moon.

16,700 Book Moon Flights

SAN FRANCISCO (U) — Pan American Airways has 16,700 reservations for flights to the moon, the airline's president said Friday.

Najeeb E. Halaby said the reservations have been stored in a computer.

He predicted there would be regular scientific explorations to the moon within 10 years and commercial travel there by the end of the century.

Watch at Moonville

MOONVILLE, Ind. (U) — The residents of this community, 47 strong, are inviting their neighbors to watch the moon landing from Moonville.

Schedule of Apollo 11 Moon-Walk Activities

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The first thing Apollo 11's landing crewmen will do after settling down on the moon is prepare to launch themselves back into space. One of the next things they do is eat dinner.

Here is a schedule of their lunar surface activities, including the first moonwalk men have attempted, all times PDT.

- SUNDAY
- 1:19 p.m. — Lunar lander named "Eagle" touched down on moon. Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin quickly check craft in case they have to blast off immediately.
 - 1:22 p.m. — A decision whether to remain on the surface, at the southwest corner of the lunar Sea of Tranquility, for the next seven minutes is made.
 - 1:29 p.m. — Safely past the first two checkpoints, a decision is made whether to remain on the moon inside the landing craft for about two hours while fellow crewman Michael Collins circles the moon once in the command ship "Columbia." Armstrong and Aldrin begin simulated countdown for blastoff, but with power to ascent engine cut off.
 - 2:38 p.m. — Decision is made whether to go ahead with surface stay.
 - 3:23 p.m. — Armstrong and Aldrin begin first meal on moon.
 - 4:03 p.m. — Astronauts start four hour rest period.
 - 8:03 p.m. — Rest period ends and crew eats a snack.

- 9:18 p.m. — Armstrong and Aldrin begin donning the backpacks which will keep them alive outside the lunar lander.
- 10:15 p.m. — Final communication and equipment checks before leaving the lander begin.
- 11:12 p.m. — Armstrong begins moving through the hatch.
- 11:17 p.m. — Armstrong pulls lanyard opening panel in front of television camera, then moves down to stand on landing craft footpad.
- 11:21 p.m. — Armstrong places his left foot on the moon, gingerly testing the surface. Then he steps from landing craft footpad onto the surface.
- 11:27 p.m. — Armstrong begins collecting small (two-pound) "grab" sample of moon material in case mission has to be terminated before other rock samples are gathered. He stows this in a pocket on the left leg of his spacesuit.
- 11:41 p.m. — Aldrin joins Armstrong on moon surface.
- 11:52 p.m. — Aldrin sets up an experiment to capture particles from the solar wind stream. It looks like an aluminum foil window shade.
- 11:53 p.m. — Armstrong, joined by Aldrin, places television camera on stand about 30 feet from landing craft so it can survey remainder of surface exploration.
- 11:56 p.m. — Armstrong begins collecting about 50 pounds of soil, rock fragments and loose rocks. This is the first of two lunar main lunar surface samples.

- MONDAY
- 12:13 a.m. — Armstrong closes and seals the first sample box. He and Aldrin begin detailed walk-around inspection of lunar lander.
 - 12:25 a.m. — Aldrin opens equipment bay door and removes two scientific experiments to be left behind on moon. One checks and reports to earth lunar seismic activity. The other provides a 100-reflector target for laser beams measuring precise Earth-moon distance. Aldrin carries experiments to their location about 70 feet from lander.
 - 12:33 a.m. — Armstrong positions laser ray reflector and adjusts it.
 - 12:34 a.m. — Aldrin begins setting up the seismic experiment. He pulls a cord and solar panels to provide electricity flop open. Then he adjusts antenna toward Earth.
 - 12:42 a.m. — Astronauts begin collecting second major material sample, documenting and photographing the location of each sample. Aldrin picks up rocks. Armstrong puts them in numbered bags, and drops them in a sack Aldrin wears on his waist.
 - 1:10 a.m. — Armstrong retrieves solar wind experiment and puts it in sealed bag.
 - 1:24 a.m. — Aldrin re-enters cabin after cleaning his spacesuit at bottom of landing craft ladder.
 - 1:39 a.m. — Armstrong joins Aldrin in the cabin.
 - 1:40 a.m. — Astronauts close hatch and repressurize cabin.
 - 2:51 a.m. — Astronauts depressurize cabin, open hatch to throw out equipment no longer needed, then re-close cabin and fill it again with oxygen.
 - 3:13 a.m. — Astronauts eat.
 - 3:53 a.m. — Armstrong and Aldrin nap for 4 hours 40 minutes.
 - 8:58 a.m. — Astronauts eat final meal on moon.
 - 10:55 a.m. — Ascent stage of lander lifts off from moon with a 6.6 minute rocket blast, using lower half of lander as launch pad, and hurls astronauts into lunar orbit.

We'll See Mars Pictures By End of This Month

By RALPH DIGHTON Science Writer

PASADENA — Pictures which could be the most exciting yet from Mars are scheduled to stream earthward late this month as twin U.S. spacecraft fly near the mysterious red planet.

Mariners 6 and 7, launched from Cape Kennedy, Fla., in February and March, carry cameras that can show features as small as 900 feet across — compared with the two-mile resolution of Mariner 4 in 1965.

Space scientists say they are sharp enough to pick out canals, pyramids, ruins, temples or geometrical patterns that might be signs of past civilizations on Mars, long a subject of science fiction speculation.

Mariner 6 will snap the first of its pack of 74 pictures July 28 while 770,800 miles from Mars and keep shooting as it sweeps within 2,000 miles of the planet's equator July 30.

ITS FIRST distant pictures, stored on tape, will be televised July 29 across 60 million miles to flight controllers at the U.S. Space Agency's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here. The first closeups will be received here July 31.

Mariner 7 will start taking its 117 pictures Aug. 1 from more than a million miles and begin televising them 24 hours later. It will sweep within 2,000 miles of Mars, south pole Aug. 4 and televise those closeups the following night.

In the camera path of the two spacecraft are some of the most intriguing areas of Mars — vast regions which grow dark in spring and light in summer; long dark lines which early astronomers called "canals," and one of the white polar caps which shrink in summer as if they were melting.

Most scientists doubt there is any higher form of life on Mars — the 21 pictures televised by Mariner 4 showed a barren, crater-pocked landscape much like the moon.

THERE IS, however, a possibility of seasonal vegetation and the task of Mariners 6 and 7 is to determine whether the Martian environment is suitable for any form of life.

Besides cameras, they carry instruments to measure the temperatures radiating from the surface and the pressures and densities of the thin atmosphere.

Precise measurement of the temperature of the white polar caps could show whether they are frozen water or carbon dioxide, which is far colder and toxic to known life forms. By "taking the temperature" of the spring-darkening areas, even from a distance, scientists may find clues to whether they are vegetation or simply rocks that change color with the season.

Final proof of whether even minute forms of life exist on Mars will have to wait for later missions. Two Mariner-class vehicles are scheduled to orbit Mars for three months in 1971 and two years later two Viking spacecraft are to orbit Mars and detach vehicles which will descend and sample the surface.

Contamination 'Not Possible'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (U) — The chief Apollo 11 doctor Friday said President Nixon and others aboard the recovery ship need not fear airborne moon contamination from the returning spaceship.

Dr. Charles A. Berry sent that word to Dr. Clarence A. Jernigan, quarantine officer aboard the USS Hornet, cruising the Pacific awaiting its recovery mission.

"Contamination from the spacecraft through downwind operations is not considered a problem because the normal carrier operations keeps an adequate separation distance," Berry told Jernigan.

"The head of the NASA recovery team, Dr. Donald Stillken, raised the question Thursday when he told a briefing: 'If the ship were close enough downwind, it might be possible for the ship to be contaminated.'

Russians Hear of Moon Medals

MOSCOW (U) — The government newspaper Izvestia Friday gave the first report here of President Nixon's announcement that medals of two dead Soviet cosmonauts will be placed on the moon by the U.S. astronauts of Apollo 11.

DESCENT ORBIT, MODULE ASCENT . . . RENDEZVOUS

what the bad one is — I hope there are no bad ones."

The critical period of Apollo 11's landing mission begins before noon today with what planners call the lunar orbit insertion burn. The rocket fires for 5 minutes 59.9 seconds while the spacecraft is out of communication with the Earth behind the moon and slows the craft almost 2,000 miles per hour.

"What we do here is brake into an orbit about the moon," said Ron Berry, chief of the lunar mission analysis branch of the space agency said recently.

TWO REVOLUTIONS later the astronauts fire the rocket again to "tune up the exact orbit we want to use as a base for LM operations," Berry said. That firing comes at 2:42 p.m., lasts 16.4 seconds and slows the spacecraft about 108 miles an hour.

Apollo 8 and 10, the two prior moon missions, were put into a 69 mile circular orbit. On Apollo 11, it's 62 by 76 miles to compensate for the uneven influence of the moon's gravity on the orbit.

By the time Eagle is ready to dock again with the command ship, the moon's gravity will have made that orbit circular.

"IT DOESN'T matter that much I suppose," said Jim McPherson, chief of the math-physics branch of the mission planning and analysis department.

"We're just getting cocky and we're going to tune it up real finely on Apollo 11 — that's about all you can say."

Both Apollo 8 and 10 performed similar rocket firings.

Sunday, at 12:11 p.m., Armstrong and Aldrin fire the moon lander's descent engine for 28 seconds, slowing the spacecraft about 50 miles per hour and starting the long descent to landing. This, too, has been done before on Apollo 10.

BERRY SAID the powered descent — the actual landing approach — begins with another rocket firing in the 50,000 foot orbit.

That rocket firing lasts 11 minutes 52 seconds and changes the lander's speed by 4,650 miles an hour leading — if all goes as planned — to a landing on the surface of the moon at 1:19 p.m.

While the work on the moon's surface is the most spectacular portion of the mission, there are two critical rocket firings left — one to get Armstrong and Aldrin off the moon and another to get the reassembled crew home.

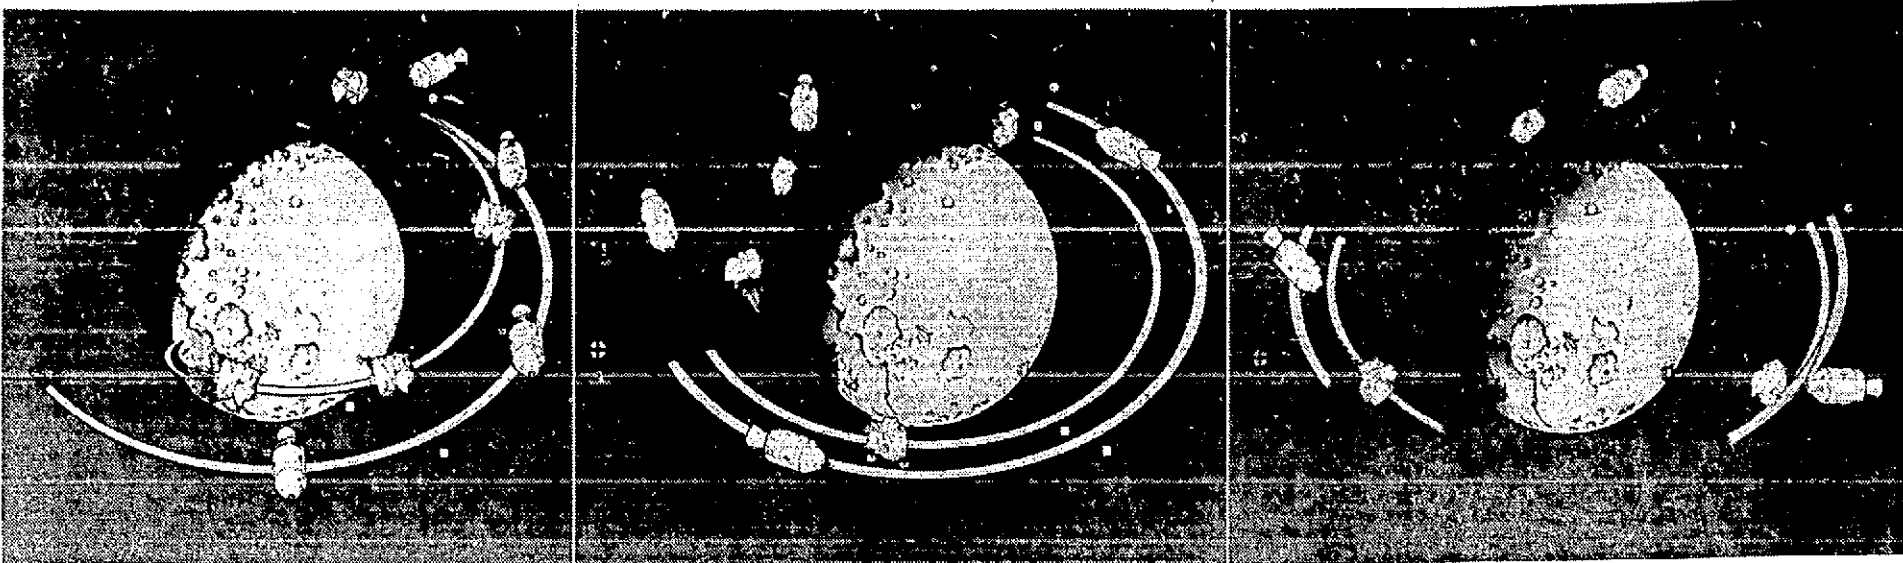

THE FIRST firing comes at 10:15 a.m. Monday when the astronauts trigger the moon lander's ascent engine for 7 minutes, 23 seconds to get back into moon orbit. This has never been done in space. Its importance to the success and safety of the flight is obvious.

After a series of maneuvers to set up and complete the rendezvous and coking, the astronauts start home. At 9:57 a.m., at the end of 30 revolutions in moon orbit, they fire the Apollo command ship's big rocket for 2 minutes, 29 seconds behind the moon to break away and head for Earth.

RADIATION DANGER NIL —VAN ALLEN

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Dr. James Van Allen, University of Iowa physicist who discovered the radiation belts around Earth, says the chances are "perhaps one in 300" that the Apollo 11 astronauts will encounter dangerous radiation from the sun.

But Van Allen said that had the moon-bound astronauts been in space during one four-day period of heavy radiation in late 1960, they would have received a "medically significant" dose of radiation despite the shielding of their spacecraft.

orbit. The lower portion of the lunar module will remain on the moon. Center, the ascent module blasts off from the moon to rendezvous with the command module. Its smaller orbit allows it to catch up with the command module. At right, the orbits are matched and the ascent module docks with the command module so Armstrong and Aldrin can join Collins in the command module. The ascent module will then be jettisoned as will the ascent after the astronauts are safe in the command module. Arrow and circle cross indicate Earth's tangent.

No Rescue if Vehicle Fails Astronauts

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Death awaits the Apollo astronauts if they become marooned on the moon — and they know it.

For there is no rescue vehicle that could save them.

Even if another spacecraft were poised on the Cape Kennedy launch pad, it would take four days to reach the moon. Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., will land with only a 48-hour supply of oxygen.

If, in landing, their lunar module becomes tilted more than 35 degrees, they cannot fire their ascent engine to rejoin the command ship orbiting above them. The trajectory would not be right. And they have no tools to set the LM upright. Even on the moon, the LM weighs 16,000 pounds, too heavy for men in bulky space suits to shove around.

The command ship, piloted by Michael Collins, could not come down, pick them up, and blast off again. It has neither the rocket engines nor guidance equipment to do so.

Were another Apollo spacecraft already in moon orbit, or near it, its LM with two men aboard couldn't pick up the castaways. There isn't room in the LM for more than two men.

The assurance going for

Armstrong and Aldrin is that "engineering talent has been concentrated on reliability and basic designs," says Christopher C. Kraft Jr., director of flight operations.

A rescue vehicle would cost several times more than the Apollo spacecraft and it would have to have far more intricate flight capabilities, Kraft explained.

Practically every system involved for crew safety has a backup system in case the primary one fails, he says. This includes such things as electrical and cooling systems, the gyroscopes and computer, engine pressure valves and regulators.

In ordinary airplane flight, the greatest dangers come at take-off and landing. And the launching of a highly volatile Saturn rocket is incredibly risky, Kraft admits.

But of Apollo's safety, he said, "I suspect it is as safe as a transport plane flight, certainly if you don't include the landings and take-offs. Take out the launching, and reliability numbers are very high."

The reason the Apollo flights cost so much is "the reliability of the hardware" with all of its many thousands of parts, Kraft says.

"You can get a good tape recorder at a store for $100. In a space vehicle 20 of them might cost $1 million. You must be sure that when a device is supposed to run for 14 hours, it will, and that it will stand up against heat, vibrations, salt spray and exposure to oxygen under pressure. This helps explain why what we build is reliable. A phenomenal amount of testing and paper work is involved to prove it all works."

The demand for reliability is, for Armstrong and Aldrin, an all or nothing affair.

Robot Lens to Telecast Moon Step

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — An automatic camera, specially built to move into place and focus on the correct spot without guidance of a cameraman, will relay to earth live television picture of man's first step on the moon.

The camera is attached to a bench that is folded into the lunar module landing vehicle. As Neil A. Armstrong, the first man out of the moon lander, goes down the ladder to the surface he will pull a ring. It operates the mechanism that turns the work bench, turns on the camera and focuses it on the foot of the ladder.

Electronic signals that are the television picture are sent back to earth from the spacecraft antenna.

TECHNICIANS, because of spacing problems, had to mount the camera upside down on the work bench, and the original transmission will appear that way. But before the picture reaches home viewers around the world it will be inverted so that Armstrong will be shown right side up.

Armstrong will lift the television camera from the work bench about 40 minutes after he steps on the moon, set it up about 30 feet away on a tripod. From there, the camera will scan most of the activities Armstrong and Air Force Col. Edwin E. Aldrin will perform on the moon for the following two hours.

Armstrong said this will include a view of his planting the American flag on the moon.

16,700 Book Moon Flights

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pan American Airways has 16,700 reservations for flights to the moon, the airline's president said Friday.

Najeeb E. Halaby said the reservations have been stored in a computer.

He predicted there would be regular scientific explorations to the moon within 10 years and commercial travel there by the end of the century.

Watch at Moonville

MOONVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The residents of this community, 47 strong, are inviting their neighbors to watch the moon landing from Moonville.

Schedule of Apollo 11 Moon-Walk Activities

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The first thing Apollo 11's landing crewmen will do after settling down on the moon is prepare to launch themselves back into space. One of the next things they do is eat dinner.

Here is a schedule of their lunar surface activities, including the first moonwalk men have attempted, all times PDT.

SUNDAY

1:19 p.m. — Lunar lander named "Eagle" touched down on moon. Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin quickly check craft in case they have to blast off immediately.

1:22 p.m. — A decision whether to remain on the surface, at the southwest corner of the lunar Sea of Tranquility, for the next seven minutes is made.

1:29 p.m. — Safely past the first two checkpoints, a decision is made whether to remain on the moon inside the landing craft for about two hours while fellow crewman Michael Collins circles the moon once in the command ship "Columbia." Armstrong and Aldrin begin simulated countdown for blastoff, but with power to ascent engine cut off.

2:38 p.m. — Decision is made whether to go ahead with surface stay.

3:23 p.m. — Armstrong and Aldrin begin first meal on moon.

4:03 p.m. — Astronauts start four hour rest period.

8:03 p.m. — Rest period ends and crew eats a snack.

12:13 a.m. — Armstrong closes and seals the first sample box. He and Aldrin begin detailed walk-around inspection of lunar lander.

12:25 a.m. — Aldrin opens equipment bay door and removes two scientific experiments to be left behind on moon. One checks and reports to earth lunar seismic activity. The other provides a 100-reflector target for laser beams measuring precise Earth-moon distance. Aldrin carries experiments to their location about 70 feet from lander.

12:33 a.m. — Armstrong positions laser ray reflector and adjusts it.

12:34 a.m. — Aldrin begins setting up the seismic experiment. He pulls a cord and solar panels to provide electricity flop open. Then he adjusts antenna toward Earth.

12:42 a.m. — Astronauts begin collecting second major material sample, documenting and photographing the location of each sample. Aldrin picks up rocks. Armstrong puts them in numbered bags, and drops them in a sack Aldrin wears on his waist.

1:10 a.m. — Armstrong retrieves solar wind experiment and puts it in sealed bag.

1:24 a.m. — Aldrin re-enters cabin after cleaning his spacesuit at bottom of landing craft ladder.

1:39 a.m. — Armstrong joins Aldrin in the cabin.

1:40 a.m. — Astronauts close hatch and repressurize cabin.

2:51 a.m. — Astronauts depressurize cabin, open hatch to throw out equipment no longer needed, then re-close cabin and fill it again with oxygen.

3:13 a.m. — Astronauts eat.

3:53 a.m. — Armstrong and Aldrin nap for 4 hours 49 minutes.

8:58 a.m. — Astronauts eat final meal on moon.

10:55 a.m. — Ascent stage of lander lifts off from moon with a 6.6 minute rocket blast, using lower half of lander as launch pad, and hurls astronauts into lunar orbit.

2:32 p.m. — Ascent stage of lander docks with command ship. Moon explorers rejoin Collins in command ship and jettison landing craft cabin.

APOLLO

was corrected for Apollo 11. Before inspecting the lunar module, the astronauts were advised that Russia had assured the U.S. that Luna 15, an unmanned spacecraft which the Soviets put into lunar orbit Thursday, would not interfere with the Apollo mission.

Luna 15 was circling the moon at an altitude varying from 35 to 127 miles, and this relatively close proximity to the proposed Apollo 11 orbit led space official Frank Borman, who recently visited Russia, to telephone the Soviet Union twice for the flight track of the Soviet space vehicle.

Academician M.V. Keldysh, president of the USSR Academy of sciences, called back assurances to orbit of Luna 15 would not intersect with the "published trajectory" of Apollo 11, but gave no hint of the purpose of Luna 15, nor was he asked about it.

It was an unprecedented gesture between the world's two space powers.

Soviet scientific sources have indicated their Luna 15 spacecraft would try to make a soft landing on the lunar surface, scoop up some soil samples and return to earth before Apollo 11 returns.

British scientists listening to the Luna 15 speed around the moon said Friday they expect it to carry out additional maneuvers. They said a lunar landing beating Apollo 11 to the moon is still regarded as possible.

But the astronomers said Luna 15, on the eve of a weekend when the world will watch Americans try to become the first men on the moon, remained as much of a mystery as ever. There was no report from Soviet space officials.

In an ambiguously worded commentary late Friday night, the Soviet news agency Tass said Luna 15 has taken up the mission of previous satellites which have either landed or circled the moon.

—NASA Photo

But the dispatch, written by Anatoly Koritsky, science commentator of Tass, still did not give any firm indication if Luna 15 was a "moonscooper."

"The moon has many riddles in store and they are all yet to be unraveled," Koritsky concluded.

THE TELEVISION of the astronauts transferring between space cabins constituted the first shots showing astronauts carrying out strenuous work in their spacecraft.

They clearly showed the docking probe being removed from the tunnel, and Armstrong, after inspecting the probe commented:

"Mike (Collins) must have done a smooth job on that docking. There isn't a dent or mark on that probe."

After liftoff at Cape Kennedy, Fla., the command ship pulled away from the third stage of the Saturn rocket, turned around, and then nosed back into the Saturn, where the lunar module rode during blast-off. It was this docking to which Armstrong referred.

The television shots, which came through vividly in gold tones, also showed Armstrong cranking a ratchet wrench to remove the probe, and a long lens view through the tunnel from the lunar lander showing Armstrong and Collins in the command module.

The pictures were so clear ground observers could clearly see the yellow and black striped abort buttons on the control panels.

Just before ending the telecast, Armstrong pointed the little camera outside a lunar module window and showed the earth 204,000 miles away. "You can notice the difference (in size) between yesterday and today," he said.

As he looked at the blue, green and white sphere, Armstrong indicated he already was looking ahead to his Pacific Ocean splashdown July 24.

"Just keep the Pacific ocean nice and clear and calm on splash day, that's all we ask."

BIRTH CONTROL

to have such matters of conscience respected by public authorities."

NIXON said an expanded birth-control program is needed because current projections indicate a U.S. population increase of about 100 million by the end of the century.

Dr. Mary Calderone, executive director of SIECUS—Sex Information and Education Council of the United States—called the message "great news."

"This is a tremendous step forward toward peace," she said, "peace because population pressures engender hostility, locally and nationally."

Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, president of Planned Parenthood, said it is the "magnificent culmination" of a federal government policy which has been several years in the making.

"It certainly should make possible babies by choice rather than by chance for all Americans irrespective of financial or any other considerations," he said.

THE RIGHT REV. C. Kilmer Myers, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, said that "the position of the Episcopal Church is that population control is the most vital cog in the approach to the world's environmental problems, and the President has taken a step in the right direction."

In Washington, the Rev. James T. McHugh, director of the family life division of the United States Catholic Conference, said Nixon's statement "seems to be a positive and constructive response to the question of population growth."

McHugh said that "in speaking of present family planning programs, the President places greater emphasis on safeguarding the rights of individual couples to determine their family size and to freely choose the means of family planning that is most consonant with their religious convictions."

IN DETROIT'S inner city, Charlesetta Waddies was mildly encouraged. Known as "Mother Waddies," she is a woman who has run a soup kitchen and mission for 13 years and has taken unwed mothers into her house and cared for them until the babies were born.

"I think it's a beautiful thing," she said, "but I think there is going to have to be some work done on it."

"I think they don't have the right methods for presenting the programs," Mother Waddies continued. "They're too cold."

Marvin Davies, Florida field secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, saying he was speaking for himself and not the NAACP, took a different view.

"I do not think the President's plan is in the best interests of the black people. Our women need to produce more babies, not less. Our problems are mainly economic ones, and until we comprise 30 to 35 per cent of the population, we won't be able to really affect the power structure in this country."

"I don't think," Davies said, "this plan will get much support in the black community. The people will consider it an insult." The use of the term "low income," he contended, did not disguise that the program is aimed at black people.

Reagan Pledges State Protection for Vallejo

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Reagan said Friday he has told Vallejo city officials that the state stands ready to help provide police and fire protection during what he called the "extremely unfortunate and illegal strike" by policemen and firemen.

"As governor I will not permit any citizen of California at any time to be denied vital police and fire protection services," Reagan said.

"The state will meet the situation which now exists in Vallejo with whatever assistance it can and should provide," he added.

Money Shift Delays Vote on School Aid Until Monday

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — The Senate Friday made a last-minute change in its supplemental school-aid bill, shifting about $16 million from kindergarten improvement to junior colleges in the $95 million proposal.

The change delayed a vote on the complete bill until Monday.

Sen. Walter W. Stiern, D-Bakersfield, acting in behalf of the amendment's absent sponsor, Sen. Clair W. Burgener, R-San Diego, argued that the junior college financial situation required immediate attention, even if it meant delaying a program to encourage schools to have single-session kindergarten classes limited to 30 pupils.

No attempt was made to alter another major concept in the main bill introduced by Sen. Stephen P. Teale, D-West Point. The bill funnels a substantial portion of the $95 million into urban, low-wealth school districts, doubling the support some districts will get from the state.

Two other Senate bills, totaling $25 million in supplemental state aid, raise the total of proposed Senate-sponsored aid to the $120 million figure Gov. Reagan says is available for the purpose.

In another important action Friday, the Senate Education Committee decided to reconsider the action in which an Assembly-approved school finance bill was killed Thursday.

The bill will be reconsidered Tuesday, and it is expected to be approved so that the parliamentary machinery leading up to appointment of an Assembly-Senate conference committee to draft a compromise measure can be put in gear.

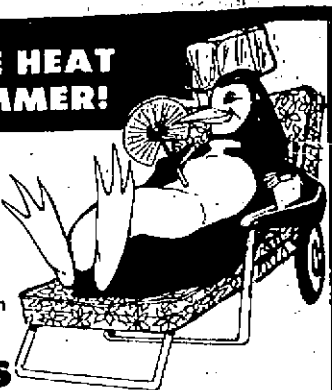

The Assembly bill, AB-606, differs from the Senate bill mainly in its emphasis on the fiscal problems of suburban bedroom communities which do not have a large industrial tax base to help support schools.

THE SENATE HAS DECIDED TO RECONSIDER THE ACTION IN WHICH AN ASSEMBLY-APPROVED SCHOOL FINANCE BILL WAS KILLED THURSDAY.

was corrected for Apollo 11. Before inspecting the lunar module, the astronauts were advised that Russia had assured the U.S. that Luna 15, an unmanned spacecraft which the Soviets put into lunar orbit Thursday, would not interfere with the Apollo mission.

LUNA 15 was circling the moon at an altitude varying from 35 to 127 miles, and this relatively close proximity to the proposed Apollo 11 orbit led space official Frank Borman, who recently visited Russia, to telephone the Soviet Union twice for the flight track of the Soviet space vehicle.

Academician M.V. Keldysh, president of the USSR Academy of sciences, cabled back assurances to orbit of Luna 15 would not intersect with the "published trajectory" of Apollo 11, but gave no hint of the purpose of Luna 15, nor was he asked about it.

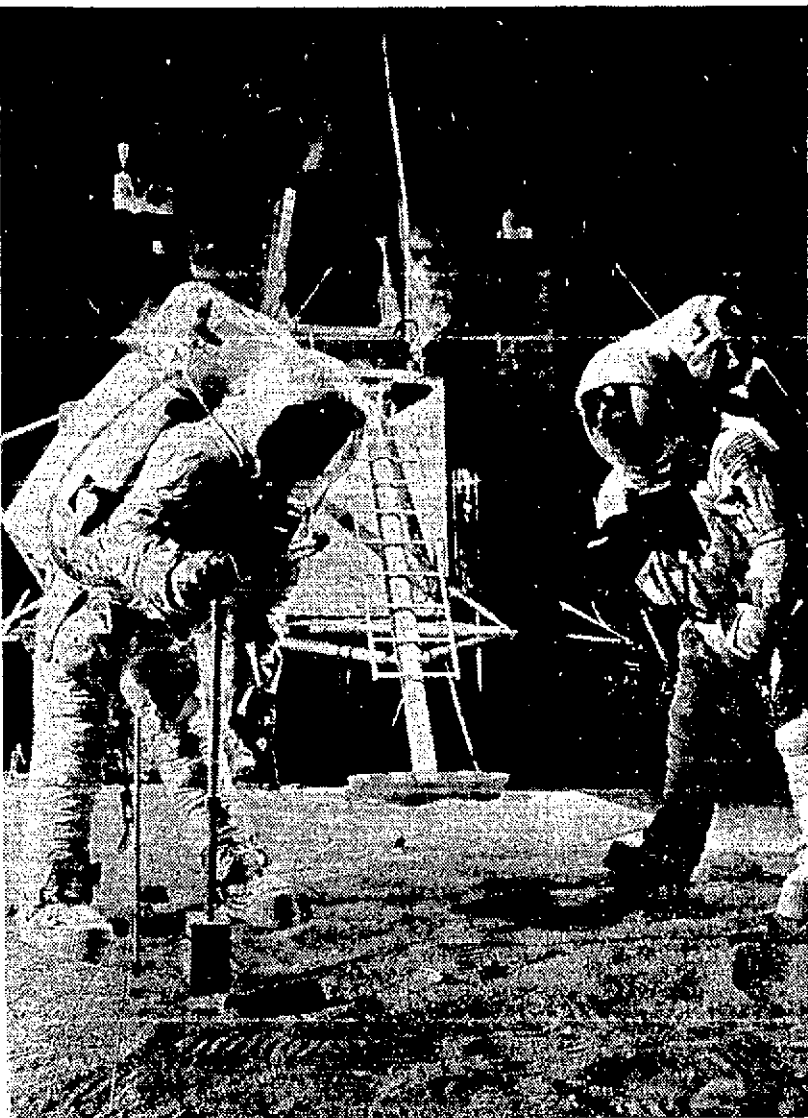

It was an unprecedented gesture between the world's two space powers.

Soviet scientific sources have indicated their Luna 15 spacecraft would try to make a soft landing on the lunar surface, scoop up some soil samples and return to earth before Apollo 11 returns.

British scientists listening to the Luna 15 speed around the moon said Friday they expect it to carry out additional maneuvers. They said a lunar landing beating Apollo 11 to the moon is still regarded as possible.

But the astronomers said Luna 15, on the eve of a weekend when the world will watch Americans try to become the first men on the moon, remained as much of a mystery as ever. There was no report from Soviet space officials.

In an ambiguously worded commentary late Friday night, the Soviet news agency Tass said Luna 15 has taken up the mission of previous satellites which have either landed or circled the moon.

But the dispatch, written by Anatoly Koritsky, science commentator of Tass, still did not give any firm indication if Luna 15 was a "moonscooper."

"The moon has many riddles in store and they are all yet to be unraveled," Koritsky concluded.

THE TELEVISION of the astronauts transferring between space cabins constituted the first shots showing astronauts carrying out strenuous work in their spacecraft.

They clearly showed the docking probe being removed from the tunnel, and Armstrong, after inspecting the probe commented:

"Mike (Collins) must have done a smooth job on that docking. There isn't a dent or mark on that probe."

After liftoff at Cape Kennedy, Fla., the command ship pulled away from the third stage of the Saturn rocket, turned around, and then nosed back into the Saturn, where the lunar module rode during blast-off. It was this docking to which Armstrong referred.

The television shots, which came through vividly in gold tones, also showed Armstrong cranking a ratchet wrench to remove the probe, and a long lens view through the tunnel from the lunar lander showing Armstrong and Collins in the command module.

The pictures were so clear ground observers could clearly see the yellow and black striped abort buttons on the control panels.

Just before ending the telecast, Armstrong pointed the little camera outside a lunar module window and showed the earth 204,000 miles away. "You can notice the difference (in size) between yesterday and today," he said.

As he looked at the blue, green and white sphere, Armstrong indicated he already was looking ahead to his Pacific Ocean splashdown July 24:

"Just keep the Pacific ocean nice and clear and calm on splash day, that's all we ask."

The astronauts concluded their third day in space and retired for the night at 6:59 p.m. PDT for a scheduled 9-hour rest.

to have such matters of conscience respected by public authorities."

NIXON said an expanded birth-control program is needed because current projections indicate a U.S. population increase of about 100 million by the end of the century.

Dr. Mary Calderone, executive director of SIECUS—Sex Information and Education Council of the United States—called the message "great news."

"This is a tremendous step forward toward peace," she said, "peace because population pressures engender hostility, locally and nationally."

Dr. Alan F. Guttmacher, president of Planned Parenthood, said it is the "magnificent culmination" of a federal government policy which has been several years in the making.

"It certainly should make possible babies by choice rather than by chance for all Americans irrespective of financial or any other considerations," he said.

THE RIGHT REV. C. Kilmer Myers, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, said that "the position of the Episcopal Church is that population control is the most vital cog in the approach to the world's environmental problems, and the President has taken a step in the right direction."

In Washington, the Rev. James T. McHugh, director of the family life division of the United States Catholic Conference, said Nixon's statement "seems to be a positive and constructive response to the question of population growth."

McHugh said that "in speaking of present family planning programs, the President places greater emphasis on safeguarding the rights of individual couples to determine their family size and to freely choose the means of family planning that is most consonant with their religious convictions."

IN DETROIT'S inner city, Charlesetta Waddles was mildly encouraged. Known as "Mother Waddles," she is a woman who has run a soup kitchen and mission for 13 years and has taken unwed mothers into her house and cared for them until the babies were born.

"I think it's a beautiful thing," she said, "but I think there is going to have to be some work done on it."

"I think they don't have the right methods for presenting the programs," Mother Waddles continued. "They're too cold."

Marvin Davies, Florida field secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, saying he was speaking for himself and not the NAACP, took a different view.

"I do not think the President's plan is in the best interests of the black people. Our women need to produce more babies, not less. Our problems are mainly economic ones, and until we comprise 30 to 35 per cent of the population, we won't be able to really affect the power structure in this country."

"I don't think," Davies said, "this plan will get much support in the black community. The people will consider it an insult." The use of the term "low income," he contended, did not disguise that the program is aimed at black people.

Reagan Pledges State Protection for Vallejo

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Reagan said Friday he has told Vallejo city officials that the state stands ready to help provide police and fire protection during what he called the "extremely unfortunate and illegal strike" by policemen and firemen.

"As governor I will not permit any citizen of California at any time to be denied vital police and fire protection services," Reagan said.

"The state will meet the situation which now exists in Vallejo with whatever assistance it can and should provide," he added.

Money Shift Delays Vote on School Aid Until Monday

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — The Senate Friday made a last-minute change in its supplemental school-aid bill, shifting about $16 million from kindergarten improvement to junior colleges in the $95 million proposal.

The change delayed a vote on the complete bill until Monday.

Sen. Walter W. Stiern, D-Bakersfield, acting in behalf of the amendment's absent sponsor, Sen. Clair W. Burgener, R-San Diego, argued that the junior college financial situation required immediate attention, even if it meant delaying a program to encourage schools to have single-session kindergarten classes limited to 30 pupils.

No attempt was made to alter another major concept in the main bill introduced by Sen. Stephen P. Teale, D-West Point. The bill funnels a substantial portion of the $95 million into urban, low-wealth school districts, doubling the support some districts will get from the state.

Two other Senate bills, totaling $25 million in supplemental state aid, raise the total of proposed Senate-sponsored aid to the $120 million figure Gov. Reagan says is available for the purpose.

In another important action Friday, the Senate Education Committee decided to reconsider the action in which an Assembly-approved school finance bill was killed Thursday.

The bill will be reconsidered Tuesday, and it is expected to be approved so that the parliamentary machinery leading up to appointment of an Assembly-Senate conference committee to draft a compromise measure can be put in gear.

The Assembly bill, AB 606, differs from the Senate bill mainly in its emphasis on the fiscal problems of suburban bedroom communities which do not have a large industrial tax base to help support schools.

'PLAYING WITH DESTINY OF EVERY CHICK, CHILD'

Dirksen Rips Mansfield on Surtax Holdup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, at his oratorical best, accused Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield Friday of "playing with the destiny of every chick and child, every man and woman" in America in delaying a vote on the 10 per cent income tax surtax.

Mansfield only smiled. He stood a few feet from Dirksen and slowly tapped his feet while Dirksen painted a dramatic picture of the economic ruin he said would sweep the country if the surtax bill does not pass soon.

"I," said Dirksen, swinging his arms, "remember bankers and others jumping out of 15 story windows." He said he came to Congress during the depression and heard Herbert Hoover make similar to his own to Democrats

THE DEBATE intensified Republican pressure for a vote on the bill extending the surtax.

The campaign has encountered the iron will of Mansfield, who insisted that legislation making the tax laws fairer must be ready as the next order of Senate business before he would permit a vote on the surtax.

The surtax, passed by the House, is the Nixon Administration's only legislation aimed at curbing inflation, the President's highest domestic priority.

The bill continues to $10 billion surtax at 10 per cent for the rest of this year, allowing it to drop to 5 per cent for the first six months of 1970, when it would expire. It also repeals the 7 per cent tax credit granted corporations in 1963 to spur business expansion.

If the surtax came to a vote now, Mansfield told the Senate in a patient voice, Senator after Senator would seek to amend it with tax reform measures. The bill that finally passed would be between the House and Senate versions and the end result could be no surtax legislation at all," he said.

"IN MY judgment," said Mansfield, such a course of action — the result of an immediate vote on the bill — "will hurt the President and it will hurt the nation." Not so, insisted Dirksen.

"Now the responsibility is here and its about time, I say it to my distinguished friend and a great majority leader, that the responsibility is here . . . I am at his beck and call . . . I prostrate myself at his feet."

Assistant Republican leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., then took over, using the stick instead of the carrot. He said if the bill were not voted upon before the Senate's three-week summer recess which starts Aug. 13 he would tour Pennsylvania and blame the Democrats for inflation.

"I'M GOING to hit the streets and carry the message," he said. "They're going to say to me, 'Why didn't we get a tax bill?' and I'm going to say the burden of inflation lies on the people who would not act!"

Scott said the bill extends

"merciés" to 13 million taxpayers whose tax rates would be cut under its terms, with five million of the poorest having to pay no income tax.

At this, Mansfield displayed about as much anger as he over allows himself to show. He said Scott "has in effect threatened us."

"I'm not interested in dispensing 'merciés' to the low-income people of this country," he said. "I'm interested in dispensing justice to all the people of this country."

JAPANESE ALARMED

U.S. to Destroy Nerve Gas; Furor Over Okinawa Mishap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army announced Friday it will start soon to destroy more than 21,000 cluster bombs containing liquid nerve gas at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal, Denver, Colo.

It agreed to follow a recommendation of a National Academy of Science's committee June 25 to "disassemble and detoxify" the surplus nerve gas bombs at the arsenal, rather than carry them across country by train to dispose of at sea.

The announcement came after the Defense Department acknowledged 24 persons were given medical attention because of a "mishap" on Okinawa earlier this month but refused to say whether nerve gas was involved.

In announcing planned disposal of the nerve gas in Denver, the Army said:

"Demilitarization will begin on a limited scale in the near future and . . . may take from 18 to 30 months."

The clusters were included among some 27,000 tons of obsolete chemical warfare agents the Army wanted to dump into the Atlantic, until strong congressional objections blocked the move.

THE ARMY asked the science academy to study the matter and a special committee issued a report June 25 recommending a series of actions to avoid, where possible, shipping the nerve gas and other chemical agents across the United States. It recommended such measures as chemical means, burning or demolition to destroy the chemical warfare material.

Publicizing the Okinawa mishap, the Wall Street Journal reported the men were placed under observation when a container or weapon containing lethal VX nerve gas inadvertently broke open at a U.S. installation July 8.

The Pentagon issued this barebones statement: "As a result of a mishap on Okinawa which occurred July 8 while they were working on a maintenance operation, 23 U.S. military personnel and one U.S. civilian employee were placed under medical observation."

"All were released and returned to full duty within about six hours. No other persons were involved."

PRESSED for further details, the Defense Department refused to say whether VX or any other chemical or biological agent was involved; refused to explain the nature of the mishap, what the "maintenance operation" involved; the branch of service of the military personnel, or any symptoms — if any — the men experienced.

"This is all we will say about it," Jerry W. Friedman, deputy assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, told newsmen after reading the statement.

He would not say whether the U.S. has chemical or biological weapons stocked overseas. "There has been no public acknowledgement there are such weapons on Okinawa."

The issue of gas weapons has become a touchy one with defense authorities because of recent disclosure that open-air testing of lethal chemical agents has been conducted at two sites in the U.S.

THE TESTING activities were halted at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., and training activity at Ft. McClellan, Ala., earlier this week. In connection with the problem, Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor named Dr. Ivan Lovelidge Bennett of New York to head a panel of civilian scientific experts to review the open-air testing problem.

Bennett is vice president of New York University and director of the New York Medical Center.

In Tokyo, U.S. Minister David Osborn was called to the Japanese Foreign Office to be questioned about the Okinawa incident. Japanese Foreign Minister Kiichi Aichi told a news conference he has requested the United States "not to cause uneasiness among the people of Okinawa" by storing gas weapons on the island.

Since the end of World War II, the U.S. has been in administrative control of Okinawa which has a population mainly of Japanese descent. There are presently 45,000 American troops on the island but there is a popular demand among the Japanese that Okinawa be returned to Japanese jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., asked Congress to investigate U.S. stockpiles of chemical and biological warfare agents. He said the U.S. had no reason to keep such stocks on Okinawa, since, he said, the Communists in Vietnam had no such weapons to use against the allies.

Stockpiles on Okinawa, he said, could cause serious trouble with Japan — "All of it unnecessary."

Officer, Girl Shot by Rapist

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An off-duty policeman who rushed into a vacant lot to save a woman under attack by a rapist was shot three times Friday in a running gun battle.

After wounding the policeman in the hand and arm and shooting the woman in the arm and thigh, the attacker escaped. A door-to-door search with dogs failed to uncover him.

The San Francisco policeman, Arthur Orrante, 31, rushed into the Fillmore District lot when he was hailed by passersby while on his way home.

THE WOMAN, a 24-year-old clerk, had been seized by a sharply dressed man and was dragged screaming and at gunpoint into the lot. She was told to disrobe and lie on the ground.

When Orrante arrived, he identified himself as a policeman and told the would-be rapist to let the woman alone. The policeman said the man immediately began shooting.

Both Orrante and the woman were in good condition after emergency treatment at San Francisco General Hospital.

The bill continues to $10 billion surtax at 10 per cent for the rest of this year, allowing it to drop to 5 per cent for the first six months of 1970, when it would expire. It also repeals the 7 per cent tax credit granted corporations in 1963 to spur business expansion.

If the surtax came to a vote now, Mansfield told the Senate in a patient voice, Senator after Senator would seek to amend it with tax reform measures. The bill that finally passed would be between the House and Senate versions and the end result could be no surtax legislation at all," he said.

"IN MY judgment," said Mansfield, such a course of action — the result of an immediate vote on the bill — "will hurt the Senate, it will hurt the President and it will hurt the nation." Not so, insisted Dirksen.

"Now the responsibility is here and its about time, I say it to my distinguished friend and a great majority leader, that the responsibility is here . . . I am at his beck and call . . . I prostrate myself at his feet."

Assistant Republican leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., then took over, using the stick instead of the carrot. He said if the bill were not voted upon before the Senate's three-week summer recess which starts Aug. 13 he would tour Pennsylvania and blame the Democrats for inflation.

"I'M GOING to hit the streets and carry the message," he said. "They're going to say to me, 'Why didn't we get a tax bill?' and I'm going to say the burden of inflation lies on the people who would not act!"

Scott said the bill extends

"mercies" to 13 million taxpayers whose tax rates would be cut under its terms, with five million of the poorest having to pay no income tax.

At this, Mansfield displayed about as much anger as he ever allows himself to show. He said Scott "has in effect threatened us."

"I'm not interested in dispensing 'mercies' to the low-income people of this country," he said. "I'm interested in dispensing justice to all the people of this country."

JAPANESE ALARMED

U.S. to Destroy Nerve Gas; Furor Over Okinawa Mishap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army announced Friday it will start soon to destroy more than 21,000 cluster bombs containing liquid nerve gas at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal, Denver, Colo.

It agreed to follow a recommendation of a National Academy of Science's committee June 25 to "disassemble and detoxify" the surplus nerve gas bombs at the arsenal, rather than carry them across country by train to dispose of at sea.

The announcement came after the Defense Department acknowledged 24 persons were given medical attention because of a "mishap" on Okinawa earlier this month but refused to say whether nerve gas was involved.

In announcing planned disposal of the nerve gas in Denver, the Army said:

"Demilitarization will begin on a limited scale in the near future and . . . may take from 18 to 30 months."

The clusters were included among some 27,000 tons of obsolete chemical warfare agents the Army wanted to dump into the Atlantic, until strong congressional objections blocked the move.

THE ARMY asked the science academy to study the matter and a special committee issued a report June 25 recommending a series of actions to avoid, where possible, shipping the nerve gas and other chemical agents across the United States. It recommended such measures as chemical means, burning or demolition to destroy the chemical warfare material.

Publishing the Okinawa mishap, the Wall Street Journal reported the men were placed under observation when a container or weapon containing lethal VX nerve gas inadvertently broke open at a U.S. installation July 8.

The Pentagon issued this barebones statement: "As a result of a mishap on Okinawa which occurred July 8 while they were working on a maintenance operation, 23 U.S. military personnel and one U.S. civilian employee were placed under medical observation. "All were released and returned to full duty within about six hours. No other persons were involved."

PRESSED for further details, the Defense Department refused to say whether VX or any other chemical or biological agent was involved; refused to explain the nature of the mishap, what the "maintenance operation" involved; the branch of service of the military personnel, or any symptoms — if any — the men experienced.

"This is all we will say about it," Jerry W. Friedheim, deputy assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, told newsmen after reading the statement.

He would not say whether the U.S. has chemical or biological weapons stocked overseas. There has been no public acknowledgment there are such weapons on Okinawa.

The issue of gas weapons has become a touchy one with defense authorities because of recent disclosure that open-air testing of lethal chemical agents has been conducted at two sites in the U.S.

THE TESTING activities were halted at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., and training activity at Ft. McClellan, Ala., earlier this week. In connection with the problem, Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor named Dr. Ivan Loveridge Bennett of New York to head a panel of civilian scientific experts to review the open-air testing problem.

Bennett is vice president of New York University and director of the New York Medical Center.

In Tokyo, U.S. Minister David Osborne was called to the Japanese Foreign Office to be questioned about the Okinawa incident. Japanese Foreign Minister Kiichi Aichi told a news conference he has requested the United States "not to cause uneasiness among the people of Okinawa" by storing gas weapons on the island.

Since the end of World War II, the U.S. has been in administrative control of Okinawa which has a population mainly of Japanese descent. There are presently 45,000 American troops on the island but there is a popular demand among the Japanese that Okinawa be returned to Japanese jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., asked Congress to investigate U.S. stockpiles of chemical and biological warfare agents. He said the U.S. had no reason to keep such stocks on Okinawa, since, he said, the Communists in Vietnam had no such weapons to use against the allies.

Stockpiles on Okinawa, he said, could cause serious trouble with Japan — "All of it unnecessary."

Officer, Girl Shot by Rapist

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An off-duty policeman who rushed into a vacant lot to save a woman under attack by a rapist was shot three times Friday in a running gun battle.

After wounding the policeman in the hand and arm and shooting the woman in the arm and thigh, the attacker escaped. A door-to-door search with dogs failed to uncover him.

The San Francisco policeman, Arthur Orrante, 31, rushed into the Fillmore District lot when he was hailed by passersby while on his way home.

THE WOMAN, a 24-year-old clerk, had been seized by a sharply dressed man and was dragged screaming and at gunpoint into the lot. She was told to disrobe and lie on the ground.

When Orrante arrived, he identified himself as a policeman and told the would-be rapist to let the woman alone. The policeman said the man immediately began shooting.

Both Orrante and the woman were in good condition after emergency treatment at San Francisco General Hospital.

Cranston Urges ABM Deferment While U.S. Explores Arms Talks

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Deployment of an ABM system by the United States would add little to the nation's defense but could greatly increase international tension, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Friday.

In a Senate speech, Cranston also claimed that simultaneous U.S. deployment of an ABM system and MIRV warheads would dangerously increase Soviet suspicions that we are aiming for a first strike capability.

Cranston favors deferment of ABM deployment until we have exhausted every opportunity to conduct arms talks with the Soviets. He has urged that the U.S. seek agreement on mutual suspension of MIRV development.

The Soviet view of ABM and MIRV would tend to support suspicions growing from U.S. involvement in Vietnam, intervention in the Dominican Republic and the Bay of Pigs affair, he declared.

Cranston said the argument that the ABM is necessary to counter a Soviet antimissile system ignores reports that the Russians have stopped work on the project, presumably because it is infeasible.

"I see no reason why we should feel any obligation to match the Russians in their mistakes," he declared.

Cranston said it would

take "an incredibly intricate command and control operation" for the Russians to simultaneously knock out all our missile silos, our Polaris submarines, our inter-continental bombers and our tactical air units based within range of Russian population and military centers.

"The idea that our deterrent forces could be credibly menaced by the Soviet Union in the foreseeable future to such an extent that they would in fact have a first strike capability appears to me so remote that it will not bear close examination," Cranston claimed.

Meanwhile, Sen. Stuart Symington Friday withdrew his request for a second secret Senate session on the Safeguard but first votes in the long controversy remain more than a week away.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said sponsors of a key amendment to limit the ABM to research, barring deployment or site acquisition, plan to seek a vote on it either July 29 or 30.

SYMINGTON, who announced toward the end of Thursday's 5 1/2-hour closed session he would seek a second secret meeting within 10 days, issued a terse statement Friday on his about-face. The Missouri Democrat, a leading ABM opponent, declined to discuss the matter with reporters.

"I now see no reason for another closed session on the ABM," Symington told the Senate.

"Later," Symington added, "during further discussion of this matter in open session, I will present to the Senate in greater detail my reasons for this conclusion."

The amendment to limit ABM to research, which is sponsored by Sens. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., and Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., is to be called up in the Senate next Tuesday. But Mansfield said the sponsors told him they would not seek a vote until the following Tuesday or Wednesday.

Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., sponsor of a rival amendment to permit deployment of the ABM's radars and computers — but not its missiles — will have to decide whether to let the Cooper-Hart amendment to come to a vote first or offer his proposal as a substitute, thus making it the first thing to be voted on.

ON THE SENATE floor, a series of speeches on the ABM attracted only a handful of senators after the turnout of more than 90 for Thursday's closed session.

Sen. Clifford P. Hansen, R-Wyo., said President Nixon's decision to deploy the Safeguard system "has withstood the test of dissent."

"Objections have been raised against it, but each has been satisfied — each rejected — to leave the basic decision even stronger for its examination," he added.

Rejecting the contention by opponents that deployment of the ABM will accelerate the arms race, Hansen said, "The United States' decision to deploy a defensive ABM has been matched by an intensive Soviet interest in arms control."

Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, also spoke against the ABM.

Moss said, "If, as I deeply believe, this new, dubious and most expensive weapons program is not an asset but a liability for the United States, how do we buy anything with it in arms talks with the Soviets?"

"Far from buying anything with the Safeguard deployment, it is likely that the Soviet negotiators will insist upon some extra consideration in the treaty."

offering, "An Evening with Edward Albee."

Two of the contemporary playwright's often-paired one-acts, "Zoo Story" and "The American Dream," provide an evening that even non-Albee fans may profitably enjoy.

The work reminds again that even questions of heart-burning concern to youth—America's life style, love and death—can be meaningfully examined within an orthodox theatrical staging.

For as tautly organized and structured by director Shashin Desai, these works project new insights into the mysteries of human existence so bothersome to many young people.

In the first finely-honed vignette, "Zoo Story," conflict swirls around two opposing life styles—the "straight" conservative vs. free yet unhappy semhippiedom.

PETER is the square who, every Sunday afternoon, seeks out a secluded dell in New York City's Central Park to read and meditate. Very much a Casper Milquetoast, he possibly is escaping marital problems in his good-address apartment.

On a fatal Sunday afternoon he is accosted by Jerry, a wild, young stranger fresh from a walk through the zoo, who wants to talk, and talk and talk.

While Jerry, a self-described "permanent transient" in this life, blusters through a succession of stories, Peter increasingly is horrified by their growing seaminess, their revelations of a world he knows but dimly.

Absolutely top-notch jobs of acting are turned in by each in this two-man cast. Richard Doyle is totally believable as the unhappy wanderer who, in the past, "tried to love . . . and tried to kill—unsuccessfully."

In many ways Kevin Hoggard's task of portraying Peter is the more difficult. He must sit on a park bench and with but a few words and body expressions convey a growing horror culminating in violence. It's a first-rate job.

Praise, too, for a set designer and crew who put together the park's Bosky dell. Naturalism at its best.

U.S. middle-class preoccupations—with material things, an allegedly boring existence, relationships with the elderly—form the theme of "The American Dream."

Mommy and Daddy's life is dissected layer by layer; their shallowness, crudities and cruelties are held up for merciless satiric examination. Wise, earthy old Grandma, who co-exists with them, holds the key—which eventually she shares with the audience. Deborah Doll, as the old lady, again displays fine, versatile talent and manages to dominate an able cast.

A three-star rating for this offering.

'SWAN LAKE'

Royal Ballet Shows Strength, Discipline in Bowl Showing

By DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

The Royal Ballet's 1963 production of "Swan Lake" returned to Hollywood Bowl for a single performance Thursday night. After having finally seen the full (with all scenery and lighting) production indoors—at the Shrine July fifth—I must say the outdoor version, which was shown at the Bowl twice in 1965, and again twice in 1967, seems pale. Not in the dancing, of course. The company, at this particular moment in its history, is strong enough, deep enough, and disciplined enough to be able to avoid the once inevitable off-nights of a strenuous tour. Thursday, with the exception of some tired-looking dancing from the ensemble's permanent guest stars, Fonteyn and Nureyev, the company maintained its standards of elegance and virtuosity.

usual chill had not set in—the handsome British troupe combined to make the occasion memorable.

As indicated, we were disappointed in the lack of excitement demonstrated by Fonteyn and Nureyev, especially in a "Black Swan" pas de deux that was more anti than climactic. But we welcomed the handsome and human villainy of Derek Rencher's Rothbart, the visual and, punitive, rather than merely accidental.

Two, the marvelous eye-lets (again Carole Hill, Avril Bergen, Susanna Armond, and Lesley Collier), and the sumptuous playing of the orchestra under John Lanchbery. At only one moment, in the Act One Waltz, did Lanchbery give the dancers less than his fullest cooperation. And there, I think, the action was intentional, and, punitive, rather than merely accidental.

ANTIQUE SHOW AT DISNEYLAND

One-of-a-kind rare objects from the pages of history will be featured among thousands of articles in the 4th Annual Disneyland Antiques Show, at Disneyland Hotel through Sunday.

The popular attraction, where all displays are limited to authentic antiques and collectables only, will be presented in the hotel's Embassy Ballroom by Mitchell-Ivey Management.

Among the special objects is a fine Pirkenhamer plate. According to Show Director John Ivey, it was made in Czechoslovakia for Pope Benedict XV and truly depicts individual craftsmanship.

Also receiving wide attention is a collection of English Spode Stone china. The show will be open from 1-10 p.m. daily and from 1-6 p.m. on Sunday.

BUT WE missed the rich settings, as well as those subtleties of lighting the Shrine performance had offered. And, because the guest principals were noticeably down on both energy and projection, we missed the kind of star-brightness that had marked the dancing of Antoinette Sibley and Anthony Dowell in the same roles 12 nights earlier.

Still, the evening was a pleasure. A huge and receptive crowd, balmy weather—even by the final, 11:45, curtain, the offering, "An Evening with Edward Albee."

Two of the contemporary playwright's often-paired one-acts, "Zoo Story" and "The American Dream," provide an evening that even non-Albee fans may profitably enjoy.

The work reminds again that even questions of heart-burning concern to youth—America's life style, love and death—can be meaningfully examined within an orthodox theatrical staging.

For as tautly organized and structured by director Shashin Desai, these works project new insights into the mysteries of human existence so bothersome to many young people.

In the first finely-honed vignette, "Zoo Story," conflict swirls around two opposing life styles—the "straight" conservative vs. free yet unhappy semhip-piedom.

PETER is the square who, every Sunday afternoon, seeks out a secluded dell in New York City's Central Park to read and meditate. Very much a Casper Milquetoast, he possibly is escaping marital problems in his good-address apartment.

On a fatal Sunday afternoon he is accosted by Jerry, a wild, young stranger fresh from a walk through the zoo, who wants to talk, and talk and talk.

While Jerry, a self-described "permanent transient" in this life, blusters through a succession of stories, Peter increasingly is horrified by their growing seaminess, their revelations of a world he knows but dimly.

Absolutely top-notch jobs of acting are turned in by each in this two-man cast. Richard Doyle is totally believable as the unhappy wanderer who, in the past, "tried to love . . . and tried to kill—unsuccessfully."

In many ways Kevin Hoggard's task of portraying Peter is the more difficult. He must sit on a park bench and with but a few words and body expres-

'SWAN LAKE'

Royal Ballet Shows Strength, Discipline in Bowl Showing

By DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

The Royal Ballet's 1963 production of "Swan Lake" returned to Hollywood Bowl for a single performance Thursday night. After having finally seen the full (with all scenery and lighting) production indoors—at the Shrine July fifth—I must say the outdoor version, which was shown at the Bowl twice in 1965, and again twice in 1967, seems pale. Not in the dancing, of course. The company, at this particular moment in its history, is strong enough, deep enough, and disciplined enough to be able to avoid the once inevitable off-nights of a strenuous tour. Thursday, with the exception of some tired-looking dancing from the ensemble's permanent guest stars, Fonteyn and Nureyev, the company maintained its standards of elegance and virtuosity.

usual chill had not set in—the handsome British troupe combined to make the occasion memorable.

As indicated, we were disappointed in the lack of excitement demonstrated by Fonteyn and Nureyev, especially in a "Black Swan" pas de deux that was more anti-climactic. But we welcomed the handsome and human villainy of Derek Rencher's Rothbart, the visual and musical bon-bons in Act and the many strengths of two, the marvelous cygnets (again Carole Hill, Avril Bergen, Susanna Arymond, and Lesley Collier), and the sumptuous playing of the orchestra under John Lanchbery. At only one moment, in the Act One Waltz, did Lanchbery give the dancers less than his fullest cooperation. Minnetonka Gets a New Commander

Cmdr. David F. Lauth relieved Cmdr. Horace G. Holmgren as skipper of the 255-foot Coast Guard cutter Minnetonka in ceremonies at Long Beach, Friday.

The departing skipper, who will serve at USCG Western Area headquarters in San Francisco, was presented with the Broze Star Medal by Capt. B. M. Chiswell, Eleventh Coast Guard District chief of staff.

The award was for meritorious service aboard the Minnetonka from January to September 1968, while the vessel was engaged in combat operations off the coast of Vietnam.

Cmdr. Lauth came from Washington, D.C., where he served as a special assistant to the assistant secretary of the Department of Transportation. He and his family plan to reside in Huntington Beach during his duty tour aboard the Minnetonka, which has principal mission of standing Ocean Station between Hawaii and the California coast during November.

Fire Restrictions

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Gov. Paul Laxalt imposed fire restrictions Friday on the Sierra Nevada fire district from the California border to Nevada's Douglas county.

CARNIVAL FUN has arrived in Long Beach with the Civic Light Opera. Carolyn Thompson cavorts as Rosalie and Phil Richards as Marco in this scene from the musical currently showing at the Municipal Auditorium. The production is scheduled to run through Sunday.

MOVIE GUIDE

As a guide to moviegoers, this newspaper on Wednesdays and Saturdays lists capsule contents of major motion pictures playing the Long Beach area. Most classifications represent the judgment of the Film Board of National Organizations.

THE BRIDGE AT REMAGEN — It's George Segal for the Americans, and Robert Vaughn for the Germans, in a World War II clash over the vital Ludendorff Bridge spanning the Rhine. (M)

WINNING — Sports car racer Paul Newman spends more time on the speedway than at his home, so his wife, Joanne Woodward, seeks solace elsewhere. (M)

PETER PAN — Walt Disney's re-issued animated version of James Barrie's eternal tale of a little boy with magical powers battling pirate Captain Hook in Never-Never Land. (G)

THE LOVE GOD — Don (Shaky) Knotts makes the transition from publisher

as a bird watcher's magazine to playboy and sex symbol. (M)

BEN HUR — Palestinian Charlton Heston combats the Romans in the time of Christ. Spectacular scenes are topped by one of the screen's most exciting chariot races. A re-release. (Before ratings)

ROMEO AND JULIET — Inspired performances by two youngsters as the lovers of Verona, spirited direction by Franco Zeffirelli and Oscar-winning cinematography of the original "West Side Story." (G)

WHERE EAGLES DARE — Richard Burton and a team of adventurers parachute into World War II Germany to rescue a top allied officer and to expose a Nazi spy network. (M)

OLIVER — Fagin's gang of young hoodlums star in this lavish musical that has won six academy awards, including best picture of the year. (G)

THE LOVE BUG — Herbie, a Volkswagen the "love bug" with a mind of its own, takes off on a winning streak for discouraged race car driver Dean Jones and mechanic Buddy Hackett. (G)

MACKENNA'S GOLD — Only the town marshal, Gregory Peck, knows the route to the "Valley of Gold," but he is captured by a bandit gang as the Apaches rampage. (M)

RATINGS:

G — Recommended for general audiences of all ages.

M — Suggested for mature audiences, adults and young people.

R — Restricted, persons under 16 not admitted unless accompanied by parent or adult guardian.

X — Persons under 16 not admitted.

ON SUNDAY Lakewood 'Y' Slates Gay 90 Day

The old and the new will be featured at the annual Lakewood YMCA old-fashioned ice cream social Sunday from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the "Y" grounds, 5425 Central Ave.

The "old" will be some of the costumes which YMCA board members will wear in keeping with the Gay 90s theme. The "new" will be the color television set which a department store has loaned those attending the social to keep up with the Apollo 11 moon mission.

The social is held each year to collect funds for YMCA projects and, although admission is free, there is a charge for refreshments.

The Long Beach Municipal Band and barbershop quartets will perform.

Bus Mechanics, Officials Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Striking maintenance workers and officials of the Greyhound Bus Company met Friday in the office of Mayor Joseph Alioto in an attempt to settle the 37-day walkout.

TIERED OF LOOKING AT APARTMENTS ALTOGETHER?

Look at the Bixby Green aparts

There's one thing about apartment hunting; you shop long enough, and pretty soon they all begin to look alike. Not quite enough room. Not quite enough privacy. Not quite right.

So much for apartments altogether. Bixby Green is something else again. Something special.

Bixby Green is a European idea. You've probably seen pictures of suburban town house colonies outside such cities as Stockholm, Paris and Amsterdam. Well, that gives you a good idea of what Bixby Green is like. Picture it:

Handsome structures within six acres of landscaped beauty. In effect, a village insulated from the rest of the community. Tree-lined walkways lead to the pool, the putting green and the other little out-of-the-way places that make a village a village. And you'll have two parking spaces. Minnetonka Gets a New Commander

Cmdr. David F. Lauth relieved Cmdr. Horace G. Holmgren as skipper of the 255-foot Coast Guard cutter Minnetonka in ceremonies at Long Beach, Friday.

The departing skipper, who will serve at USCG Western Area headquarters in San Francisco, was presented with the Broze Star Medal by Capt. B. M. Chiswell, Eleventh Coast Guard District chief of staff.

The award was for meritorious service aboard the Minnetonka from January to September 1968, while the vessel was engaged in combat operations off the coast of Vietnam.

Cmdr. Lauth came from Washington, D.C., where he served as a special assistant to the assistant secretary of the Department of Transportation. He and his family plan to reside in Huntington Beach during his duty tour aboard the Minnetonka, which has principal mission of standing Ocean Station between Hawaii and the California coast during November.

Fire Restrictions

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Gov. Paul Laxalt imposed fire restrictions Friday on the Sierra Nevada fire district from the California border to Nevada's Douglas county.

CARNIVAL FUN has arrived in Long Beach with the Civic Light Opera. Carolyn Thompson cavorts as Rosalie and Phil Richards as Marco in this scene from the musical currently showing at the Municipal Auditorium. The production is scheduled to run through Sunday.

MOVIE GUIDE

As a guide to moviegoers, this newspaper on Wednesdays and Saturdays lists capsule contents of major motion pictures playing the Long Beach area. Most classifications represent the judgment of the Film Board of National Organizations.

THE BRIDGE AT REMAGEN — It's George Segal for the Americans, and Robert Vaughn for the Germans, in a World War II clash over the vital Ludendorff Bridge spanning the Rhine. (M)

WINNING — Sports car racer Paul Newman spends more time on the speedway than at his home, so his wife, Joanne Woodward seeks solace elsewhere. (M)

PETER PAN — Walt Disney's re-issued animated version of James Barrie's eternal tale of a little boy with magical powers battling pirate Captain Hook in Never-Never Land. (G)

THE LOVE GOD — Don (Shaky) Knotts makes the transition from publisher

as a bird watcher's magazine to playboy and sex symbol. (M)

BEN HUR — Palestinian Charlton Heston combats the Romans in the time of Christ. Spectacular scenes are topped by one of the screen's most exciting chariot races. A re-release. (Before ratings)

ROMEO AND JULIET — Inspired performances by two youngsters as the lovers of Verona, spirited direction by Franco Zeffirelli and Oscar-winning cinematography of the original "West Side Story." (G)

WHERE EAGLES DARE — Richard Burton and a team of adventurers parachute into World War II Germany to rescue a top allied officer and to expose a Nazi spy network. (M)

OLIVER — Fagin's gang of young hooligans star in this lavish musical that has won six academy awards, including best picture of the year. (G)

THE LOVE BUG — Herbie, a Volkswagen the "love bug" with a mind of its own, takes off on a winning streak for discouraged race car driver Dean Jones and mechanic Buddy Hackett. (G)

MACKENNA'S GOLD — Only the town marshal, Gregory Peck, knows the route to the "Valley of Gold," but he is captured by a bandit gang as the Apaches rampage. (M)

RATINGS:

G — Recommended for general audiences of all ages.

M — Suggested for mature audiences, adults and young people.

R — Restricted, persons under 16 not admitted unless accompanied by parent or adult guardian.

ON SUNDAY

Lakewood 'Y' Slates Gay 90 Day

The old and the new will be featured at the annual Lakewood YMCA old-fashioned ice cream social Sunday from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the "Y" grounds, 5425 Centralia Ave.

The "old" will be some of the costumes which YMCA board members will wear in keeping with the Gay 90s theme. The "new" will be the color television set which a department store has loaned those attending the social to keep up with the Apollo 11 moon mission.

The social is held each year to collect funds for YMCA projects and, although admission is free, there is a charge for refreshments.

The Long Beach Municipal Band and barbershop quartets will perform.

Bus Mechanics, Officials Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Striking maintenance workers and officials of the Greyhound Bus Company met Friday in the office of Mayor Joseph Alioto in an attempt to settle the 37-day walkout.

TIERED OF LOOKING AT APARTMENTS ALTOGETHER?

Look at the Bixby Green

There's one thing about apartment hunting; you shop long enough, and pretty soon they all begin to look alike. Not quite enough room. Not quite enough privacy. Not quite right.

So much for apartments altogether. Bixby Green is something else again. Something special.

Bixby Green is a European idea. You've probably seen pictures of suburban town house colonies outside such cities as Stockholm, Paris and Amsterdam. Well, that gives you a good idea of what Bixby Green is like. Picture it:

Handsome structures within six acres of landscaped beauty. In effect, a village insulated from the rest of the community. Tree-lined walkways lead to the pool, the putting green and the other little out-of-the-way places that make a village a village. And you'll have two parking spaces. Both will probably be in the underground parking area. (At Bixby Green, cars are out of sight. Literally.)

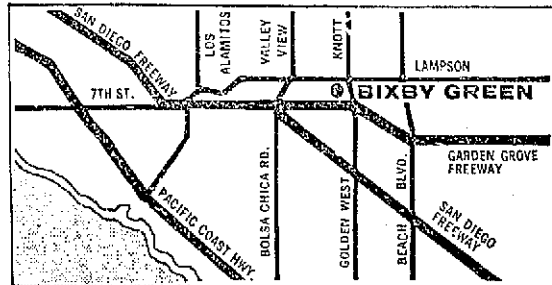

The suites are worthy of the name. Each is a two-story plan, with as many as three bedrooms upstairs. The master bedroom, with its separate bath and dressing area, would put any apartment to shame. The downstairs plan goes from entry-hallway to step-down living room to private garden patio. The all-electric kitchen opens to the dining room. Central air-conditioning, luxurious carpeting, floor-to-ceiling drapes, total sound proofing and your own washer-dryer are just some of Bixby Green's features. Don't expect to find them in other apartments.

Another thing: Bixby Green is an adult community. And for families with children 16 years and older. It's quiet here. Yet you're moments from the beaches, marinas, golf courses and other fun places of Orange County.

You could say that Bixby Green is altogether apart. And you will, when you see it.

Burden of proof is on the buyer. Until there is evidence of increasing upside depth and momentum there will be no technical reason to expect more than periodic flurries on the upside. There are a number of technical reasons why the market could go up from current levels. It is depressed and oversold. It is near the 320-340 level which should provide significant support. However more dynamic tape action will be needed before even a shorter term move of significance can be projected.

Initial reaction to recent weakness was neither bullish nor bearish. The lack of more significant momentum as the market rebounded from 840 to 855 still leaves the market in a questionable position. Their inability to sustain the initial move for more than a few sessions suggests the need to test the 840 low. A successful test of this low followed by improving market depth would be a bullish sign on a shorter term basis. A failure to hold above this level would suggest further weakness and a test of the 820 area.

HOW HIGH the market could rally were it to gain some upward momentum above the 840 low is difficult to assess. A gradual and sluggish rebound would be expected to meet increasing resistance within the 860-870 levels. A more dynamic recovery could result in even higher levels. However any rally not preceded by a base of consolidation or obvious reversal cannot be considered more than a contra trend move.

It would not be considered more than a shorter term trading opportunity. It would be expected to lead to more of a selling than a buying opportunity. Therefore while the market could turn up at any point there is no basis yet for more than nimble trading.

Funds and institutions continue to hold back. They have failed to shift from their cautious stance. They are still selling more than they are buying. This alone does not suggest that the market is building up to a real recovery over the shorter term. Among the stocks under significant accumulation last week which are regarded favorably on a technical basis are Ampex, Merck, Sperry Rand, and Xerox.

RELATIVE STRENGTH has been demonstrated by the continued stability of the drug group. The lack of more dynamic tape action during recent periods of market improvement has disguised an increasing interest in this area. The gradual improvement in this group does not suggest shorter term trading opportunities. Nonetheless relative resistance and increasing relative strength should make this area one of the more attractive for longer term trading.

One of the strongest issues in this group recently has been Merck. The stock continues to challenge its previous record high at the 97 level. A volume penetration would be bullish and provide the basis for higher levels near and longer term. It would suggest upside potential to the 110 area. However under current market conditions such a rally would be expected more on a longer than shorter term basis. A volume rally above the 97 level would make the stock attractive for the more quality minded and patient traders.

The Senate Finance Committee approved the House-passed surtax extension bill and sent it to the Senate floor for debate Thursday. But on Friday the Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said "many weeks" of debate are in prospect. "An attempt is made to kill the bill before the Senate," The Democratic Finance Committee is to meet today to decide what to do about the bill.

Week's Wall Street Trend

NEW YORK (AP) — For short while it looked as if the stock market might bounce into the winning column this past week, but the rally which buoyed it for two sessions failed in the stretch and the market was a loser.

By GEOFFREY PARKINSON
Technical Analyst With Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis

Burden of proof is on the buyer. Until there is evidence of increasing upside depth and momentum there will be no technical reason to expect more than periodic surges on the upside. There are a number of technical reasons why the market could go up from current levels. It is depressed and oversold. It is near the 320-340 level which should provide significant support. However more dynamic tape action will be needed before even a shorter term move of significance can be projected.

Initial reaction to recent weakness was neither bullish nor bearish. The lack of more significant momentum as the market rebounded from 840 to 855 still leaves the market in a questionable position. Their inability to sustain the initial move for more than a few sessions suggests the need to test the 840 low. A successful test of this low followed by improving market depth would be a bullish sign on a shorter term basis. A failure to hold above this level would suggest further weakness and a test of the 820 area.

HOW HIGH the market could rally were it to gain some upward momentum above the 840 low is difficult to assess. A gradual and sluggish rebound would be expected to meet increasing resistance within the 860-870 level. A more dynamic recovery could result in even higher levels. However any rally not preceded by a base of consolidation or obvious reversal cannot be considered more than a contra trend move.

It would not be considered more than a shorter term trading opportunity. It would be expected to lead to more of a selling than a buying opportunity. Therefore while the market could turn up at any point there is no basis yet for more than nimble trading.

Funds and institutions continue to hold back. They have failed to shift from their cautious stance. They are still selling more than they are buying. This area does not suggest that the market is building up to any real recovery over the shorter term. Among the stocks under significant accumulation last week which are regarded favorably on a technical basis are Ampex, Merck, Sperry Rand, and Xerox.

RELATIVE STRENGTH has been demonstrated by the continued stability of the drug group. The lack of more dynamic tape action during recent periods of market improvement has disguised an increasing interest in this area. The gradual improvement in this group does not suggest shorter term trading opportunities. Nonetheless relative resistance and increasing relative strength should make this area one of the more attractive for longer term trading.

One of the strongest issues in this group recently has been Merck. The stock continues to challenge its previous record high at the 97 level. A volume penetration would be bullish and provide the basis for higher levels near and longer term. It would suggest upside potential to the 110 area. However under current market conditions such a rally would be expected more on a longer than shorter term basis. A volume rally above the 97 level would make the stock attractive for the more quality minded and patient traders.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Garden geraniums are one of the easiest of plants to grow and perhaps that's the reason many of them are neglected and become overgrown and raggedy looking, yet furnish bright color blossoms.

One of the touching sights that caused us to glance back a second time was a group of three geraniums planted in front of a three foot tall clipped hedge. It was the only floral color in front of the main four-step-high porch-landing entrance. We suffered for those plants, because the soil was hard clay. Water couldn't possibly penetrate much into it, also the hedge robbed the plants of most of the available moisture. Yet, they were growing, and there were some blossoms on each plant!

We've seen some deep maroon color geraniums growing in Beaumont near a garden wall. A few feet away some snow was on the ground. Mind you, we're not recommending you to plant them in such colder areas.

ZONAL GERANIUMS... Easy Growers

are budded, like good roses are.

WHAT YOU DO right now to take care of the chrysanthemums will determine the number and quality of flowers you'll have at their blooming time. This means you must continue pinching the mums you're growing for lots of flowers. The pinching out of the branch tips each time two pairs of leaves have formed well, forces more branch growth, and develops sturdier stems growth. You probably won't have to think of staking up such plants until the flower buds first begin to show color. Such branch-tips pinching develops a full round plant as though it were a bush that trimmed like a globe-shape boxwood.

Fertilize the mums with a balanced plant food, containing most phosphoric acid element fertilizer.

Two most important dahlia-care chores is to water the plants deeply, and spray for spider mites, leaf miners, thrips, and leaf hoppers. Snail-slug bait periodically.

Q. Why do my Lion's Ears (Leonitis leonurus) leaves get yellow, is it because of too much water or not enough? I've had the plant about two year now. It gets the morning sun, away from the wind. The yellow orange flowers are interesting. Any special food for it? Will rose food with systemic in it help the plant?

A. The Lion's ear plant grows easily and doesn't need much fussing or care. Your plant is likely to turn yellow due to getting too much water rather than not enough. Feeding it will help it. Inspect the top and underside of the yellow leaves to see if there may be aphids, spider mites, or white flies. If you find some spray with an insecticide listing those pests on the bottle label.

Q. Our regular-size 7-year-old lime tree has fruit which will not hang on until maturity. To all appearances it is a healthy tree and has a profusion of blossoms. The fruit grows to the size of small marbles, then the small stem on which the fruit hangs, turns brown and the fruit drops. We have fed it three times a year with citrus food, and deep water it once a month.

A. If the tree is growing in the open-ground area and not in a flower bed surrounded by annuals or perennials that are watered frequently, not in a lawn where tree gets too much superficial upper soil surface moisture but not enough deep watering, then you can help the tree. After tree has been well watered, spread about one-quarter inch thickness of manure evenly around it and soak slowly to settle evenly over the soil. A circular furrow (ditch) a foot or so beyond the drip line of the tree is much better than a basin because the water will soak as far out beyond the drip line of the tree as it will soak up to the tree trunk. This means roots will grow further out. The other reason for the furrow is to prevent water from standing around the tree trunk before it soaks in. This will eliminate possible bacterial gummosis disease. The tree can be helped by giving it a high nitrogen feeding as the first fertilization of the year, followed by the two citrus food feedings later.

ABOUT MID-JULY is the last month you should prune the azaleas whether they need drastic heavy pruning or light trimming. Thereafter cut back only the long suckery canes to balance with the rest of the plant branches.

Some gardeners become excited when they notice a long, vigorous branched succulent cane that generally furnishes rosy-lavender azalea flowers, when the rest of the branches may provide pink, or whatever color it happens to be. The gardeners think maybe the plant had developed a "sport branch." Such succulent cane usually is not a sport but is a "sucker" like a rose sucker on a good budded rose. Some azaleas

REPLACE the old rose bushes you thought would stagger through this year if these haven't furnished the blossoms you hoped for. Plant new ones. Mix one-third of organic mulch material, a cupful of bone meal and cupful of soil sulphur with two-thirds soil, and set the plantings out. You'll harvest at least two crops of lovely roses.

African marigolds don't come from Africa; French marigolds don't come from France. Both of these general types of marigolds originally were natives of Mexico which was also the place of origin for zinnias. The fact that both marigolds and zinnias originate close to home is probably the reason they are well adapted to this continent.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Garden geraniums are one of the easiest of plants to grow and perhaps that's the reason many of them are neglected and become overgrown and raggedy looking, yet furnish bright color blossoms.

One of the touching sights that caused us to glance back a second time was a group of three geraniums planted in front of a three feet tall clipped hedge. It was the only floral color in front of the main four-step-high porch-landing entrance. We suffered for those plants, because the soil was hard clay. Water couldn't possibly penetrate much into it, also the hedge robbed the plants of most of the available moisture. Yet, they were growing, and there were some blossoms on each plant!

We've seen some deep maroon color geraniums growing in Beaumont near a garden wall. A few feet away some snow was on the ground. Mind you, we're not recommending you to plant them in such colder areas.

YOU'D BRIGHTEN your patio area if you grew some in containers, but be sure you water them well when they need it. Feed them (lightly) a balanced plant food with less nitrogen content than of phosphorus. Place them in the sunniest area of your patio. Grow them in partial shade in desert communities. Keep a sharp lookout for those devilish worms that chew holes in the leaves and eat the base of the individual short blossom stalks and the petals. Spray at the first sign of the damaged leaves or flowers. Yes, even if you find a few worm castings on the leaves and don't know what they are. Those droppings means the chewing worms are around and may not have started to feast on the plants. Use a stomach-type spray your nurseryman recommends to kill them. One spraying may not be enough.

Raggedy vine-like branched Martha Washington geraniums may make you feel quite unhappy in terms of gardening results, even though these are no doubt, the most beautiful and showiest of any types of geraniums. Cheer up, come mid-September prune them back. Follow through with the suggestions and you'll have geraniums next spring that will be every bit as showy and attractive as azaleas.

Just remember, mid-September is the time to prune back these sprawly branches two to four remaining mature leaves. DON'T cut them back any further. If you do, you might cause the remainder branch or branches to die back. Cut back further down if needed after new growth has grown out an inch or so in size, but again, be sure to leave two to four leaves.

ABOUT MID-JULY IS the last month you should prune the azaleas whether they need drastic heavy pruning or light trimming. Thereafter cut back only the long suckery canes to balance with the rest of the plant branches.

Some gardeners become excited when they notice a long, vigorous branched succulent cane that generally furnishes rosy-lavender azalea flowers, when the rest of the branches may provide pink, or whatever color it happens to be. The gardeners think maybe the plant had developed a "sport branch." Such succulent cane usually is not a sport but is a "sucker" like a rose sucker on a good budded rose. Some azaleas are budded, like good roses are.

WHAT YOU DO right now to take care of the chrysanthemums will determine the number and quality of flowers you'll have at their blooming time. This means you must continue pinching the mums you're growing for lots of flowers. The pinching out of the branch tips each time two pairs of leaves have formed well, forces more branch growth, and develops sturdier stems growth. You probably won't have to think of staking up such plants until the flower buds first begin to show color. Such branch-tips pinching develops a full round plant as though it were a bush that trimmed like a globe-shape boxwood.

Fertilize the mums with a balanced plant food, containing most phosphoric acid element fertilizer.

Two most important dahlia-care chores is to water the plants deeply, and spray for spider mites, leaf miners, thrips, and leaf hoppers. Snail-slug bait periodically.

Q. Why do my Lion's Ears (Leonitis leonurus) leaves get yellow, is it because of too much water or not enough? I've had the plant about two year now. It gets the morning sun, away from the wind. The yellow orange flowers are interesting. Any special food for it? Will rose food with systemic in it help the plant?

A. The Lion's ear plant grows easily and doesn't need much fussing or care. Your plant is likely to turn yellow due to getting too much water rather than not enough. Feeding it will help it. Inspect the top and underside of the yellow leaves to see if there may be aphids, spider mites, or white flies. If you find some spray with an insecticide listing those pests on the bottle label.

Q. Our regular-size 7-year-old lime tree has fruit which will not hang on until maturity. To all appearances it is a healthy tree and has a profusion of blossoms. The fruit grows to the size of small marbles, then the small stem on which the fruit hangs, turns brown and the fruit drops. We have fed it three times a year with citrus food, and deep water it once a month.

A. If the tree is growing in the open-ground area and not in a flower bed surrounded by annuals or perennials that are watered frequently, not in a lawn where tree gets too much superficial upper soil surface moisture but not enough deep watering, then you can help the tree. After tree has been well watered, spread about one-quarter inch thickness of manure evenly around it and soak slowly to settle evenly over the soil. A circular furrow (ditch) a foot or so beyond the drip line of the tree is much better than a basin because the water will soak as far out beyond the drip line of the tree as it will soak up to the tree trunk. This means roots will grow further out. The other reason for the furrow is to prevent water from standing around the tree trunk before it soaks in. This will eliminate possible bacterial gummosis disease. The tree can be helped by giving it a high nitrogen feeding as the first fertilization of the year, followed by the two citrus food feedings later.

REPLACE the old rose bushes you thought would stagger through this year if these haven't furnished the blossoms you hoped for. Plant new ones. Mix one-third of organic mulch material, a cupful of bone meal and cupful of soil sulphur with two-thirds soil, and set the plantings out. You'll harvest at least two crops of lovely roses.

African marigolds don't come from Africa; French marigolds don't come from France. Both of these general types of marigolds originally were natives of Mexico which was also the place of origin for zinnias. The fact that both marigolds and zinnias originate close to home is probably the reason they are well adapted to this continent.

Singer Awaiting AL Stars

Dodger Defense Stalls Giant Rally
By FRED CLAIRE
Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Next Tuesday Dodger pitcher Bill Singer will see his second All-Star game in person.

He will have a good view of the action at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington — the pitching mound.

"When I saw my first All-Star game my view wasn't too good," Bill recalled Friday night after pitching the Dodgers to a 3-2 victory over the Giants. "That was in 1959 at the Coliseum. I was so far away I needed a TV set to see what was happening."

In 10 years, from 1959 to 1969 there has been a big change in Bill Singer. He has moved from a high school sophomore shortstop at Pomona to a star pitcher in the majors.

He has a good chance of being the National League's starting pitcher Tuesday. He will have had the proper rest — three days — and his credentials are in order.

Singer's victory was his 13th of the season and he is tied for the NL strikeout lead with 159 after striking out seven Giants. His earned run average is 1.97 and that's the best in the NL among righthanded starters.

Bill Singer, claim Dodger opponents, throws "bullets."

He struck out the first four Giants falling two short of a major league record for strikeouts at the beginning of a game.

"There was some good defense behind me tonight," said Singer. The Dodger defense was outstanding with rookie second baseman Ted Sizemore making two great plays and perhaps a game-saver in the ninth inning.

There also was a save by Jim Brewer, who came on with two outs in the ninth to retire Ron Hunt and gain his 15th save of the season.

The game started with two Dodger bunts for hits and ended with the Giants slugging bombs for outs.

Yanks Lead Russ Record Breakers

By JOHN DIXON

The United States led the team race, Russia led in cheers and the British Commonwealth also participated in an international track and field festival Friday night at the Coliseum.

As competition continues today, with the decathlon at 9 a.m., other events at noon, the Yanks led the Russians, 100-90 in combined men-women scoring. They are in front of the United Kingdom, 103-82. Surprisingly, both U.S. men and women — the latter usually more renowned for their cooking than their athletics — are bellwethers on the computer.

A tiny throng of 15,859 had plenty to cheer about — most of it generated by Russians.

Three all-time bests of U.S. soil were achieved, and for each a son of the Soviet got the credit.

Aleksander Morozov won the 3,000-meter steeplechase in 8:26.0, guillotining the Coliseum record by eight seconds, deadheading the Russian record.

Kerry O'Brien of Australia was nipping at his heels as they reached the final hurdle, but to O'Brien it must have looked like a pole vault bar. When he finally got over, the race was almost over. O'Brien finished in a career best of 8:26.8.

The top two indicated that the world record of 8:24.2, owned by Jouko Kuho of Finland is in dire danger.

Olympic Games finalist

Viktor Saneyev toppled the Coliseum record by four inches in the triple jump, soaring 55 feet, 5 1/2 inches. The Americans were five feet to the rear.

In the greatest head-to-head competition of the night, Russian Anatoly Bondarchuk edged Russian Ronald Klim in the hammer throw.

Both dropped the 16-pounder out of the clouds at 237-5, surpassing the Coliseum standard by eight feet. Bondarchuk was judged the winner — his second longest throw was 237-3, Klim's was 236-2. George Frenn of Long Beach was third in a strong 225-11.

The 18-foot pole vault is still a dream.

Bob Seagren won the event at 17-6 3/4, but missed badly at three attempts at 18-1.

Ron Clarke of Australia felt out the field for two laps in the 10,000 meters, then annihilated it. He won in 28:35.4, 15 seconds in front of Nikolay Sviridov. Blisters and exhaustion forced Clarke to withdraw from today's 5,000.

While the Women's 800-meter run was as routine as turning on a light, the men's race was a shocker. World record holder Ralph Doubell of the British Commonwealth was an overwhelming favorite. If he didn't win, teammate Byron Dyce, U.S. collegiate and AAU champion was sure to.

There was no surprise in the tempo, a blistering 51.0

at 400 meters, established by Felix Johnson of the U.S. He carries a stopwatch in his head, but his finish kick resembles a girl's more closely than a nuke's.

Like a giant tow truck, Johnson pulled the field through the final curve. Suddenly Juris Luzins, born in Germany and representing the U.S. for the first time, sprinted into the lead. It was a game of catch-up, and no one could.

Luzins won by five yards. Doubell, displaying none of his Olympic Games finish, edged Johnson by a centimeter for second with a long last stride lean.

Luzins was credited with 1:46.7, Doubell and Johnson 1:47.4.

Olympic champion Madeline Manning of the U.S. won the women's 800 in 2:03.8, leading every step of the way. Alla Kolyessnikova of — you guessed it, Russia — was second, 12 yards back in the dust, at 2:03.0.

The 100-meter sprints, as expected, were American sweeps.

In the women's race, Barbara Ferrell and Iris Davis were out of the blocks so quickly it almost appeared that they jumped the gun. The recall starter didn't challenge and neither did anyone else. Ferrell's 11.5 was one yard swifter than Davis' 11.6.

In the men's 100, national champion Ivory Crockett and world's fastest human John Carlos broke in front. Carlos stretched his long legs, and only Crockett was in the race. Crockett trimmed a two-yard deficit to one, and both eased up in the final yards. They were clocked in 10.3.

Christine Thompson of the United Kingdom won the women's javelin throw at 174 feet, 11 inches. Kathy Schmidt, 15-year-old Wilson High student, was fourth at 169-4, eight feet shy of her winning distance in the national championships.

Yank Kathy Hammond won the women's 400 by eight yards in a Coliseum record 53.0, and Olympic gold medalist Lee Evans won the men's race in 45.3. With 40 yards to victory teammate Tommie Turner closed to within one yard of Evans, but Lee, tougher than a knot in an oak, dug down, found a little more adrenalin, and ran away.

Olympic champion in the decathlon, Bill Toomey, a 30-year-old Santa Barbara school teacher, may be the

NAMATH ENDS RETIREMENT BY SELLING BAR

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broadway Joe Namath, pro football's swinging Super Bowl hero, ended his retirement from the game Friday by knocking under at last to the order of pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle that he sell his interest in a New York bar said to be frequented by "undesirables."

The announcement, made jointly by Namath and Rozelle, came exactly six weeks after Namath had tearfully announced he was "retiring" rather than bow to Rozelle's order.

"Joe and I and professional football have gone through six difficult weeks. We are happy to say that the situation is resolved," said Rozelle.

The "solution" appeared to be entirely on the terms of Rozelle's original order—that Namath sell his interest in Bachelors III.

"We all got a little tired of this situation eventually," said Namath. "I didn't think this would involve as many people as it has, but this thing has gotten completely out of proportion. Because of the people this involved and because I do want to play football, Mr. Rozelle and I got together and resolved this thing by me selling Bachelors III."

Rozelle's order to Namath had been based on the charge by the commissioner's investigators that "undesirable" people had been "frequenting" the East Side New York bar. Pro football has traditionally fought to keep itself clear of any connection with gambling.

In agreeing to do exactly what Rozelle told him to, Namath was emphatic in insisting he doesn't agree with any charges made about the bar.

"I want to stress that I am not doing this because there is anything wrong with Bachelors III," Namath said. "But because of the publicity that it has received and the stories that have circulated about it, Mr. Rozelle and I thought it would be best if I divested myself of my share of the club for the best interest of professional football."

Rozelle said it would be a "clean sale," and that Namath was not selling his interest in the bar to relatives or friends.

A slip of the foot — at least that's the way umpire Art Frantz read it — cost the Angels their longest winning spree of the season Friday night.

It was one of four Anaheim miscues and it led to four unearned runs in the eighth inning and sent Oakland to a 6-3 victory over the Halos at Anaheim stadium.

The Angels were leading at the time, 3-1, heading for their fourth win in a row — a 1969 high. Danny Cater opened the eighth with a single and then Rick Monday bounced one to Jim Spencer at first.

Spencer fired to Jim Fregosi who was covering second.

Fregosi took the throw, shuffled his feet and then threw back to first a trifle late to get Monday.

But wait! Second base ump Frantz ruled Cater safe at second, claiming Fregosi missed the bag.

"I slid my back foot over the base," insisted the Angels' All-Star shortstop. "When I switched my feet, I took my time to throw back to first since the pitcher had to cover and well, that's when I must have confused him."

"He tagged the base," agreed Angel skipper Lefty Phillips. "When he switched his feet like he did he confused the ump."

"Jimmy never says much to umpires. This is the first time I've really seen him holler."

Frantz, a rookie arbiter this season in the American League, defended his call after the game. "He missed the base by a foot," he said.

As it was, the A's, still bidding to overtake streaking Minnesota in the A.L. West, ran up four unearned runs, chased Halo starter Jim McGlothlin and sprinted to their sixth win in eight starts this year against the Angels.

Chuck Dobson continued his whammy over Anaheim. The Oakland right-hander brought a string of five consecutive complete games against the Angels into Friday's series opener. If it's any consolation, he was removed after seven innings this time but, as luck would have it, still got the victory, his 11th.

The win is Oakland's eighth in its last nine starts but, even so, the A's have

Frenn Calls Soviet Rival 'Poor Sport'

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

The cementing of international relations has taken another plastering.

John Carlos and George Frenn regard their Russian track and field rivals with something close to contempt, the Russians' feelings are hurt and the British Commonwealth finds itself caught uncomfortably in the crossfire.

Frenn, Long Beach's commuting hammer thrower, called Russian rival Ronald Klim a "poor sport" for refusing to be interviewed after losing (on second-best throws) to Soviet teammate Anatoly Bondarchuk.

"See what poor sports they are?" Frenn said as he attempted to beckon them into the press area. "He (Klim) cussed me out and left. He's just angry 'cause he got second."

Later a Russian interpreter claimed that the hammer throwers walked away because there was nobody to meet them, pointing out that their triple jumpers had waited patiently for several minutes to be interviewed but were ignored.

Frenn, who placed third, angrily pool-pooled that notion.

SAN FRANCISCO — Next Tuesday Dodger pitcher Bill Singer will see his second All-Star game in person.

He will have a good view of the action at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington — the pitching mound.

"When I saw my first All-Star game my view wasn't too good," Bill recalled Friday night after pitching the Dodgers to a 3-2 victory over the Giants. "That was in 1959 at the Coliseum. I was so far away I needed a TV set to see what was happening."

In 10 years, from 1959 to 1969 there has been a big change in Bill Singer. He has moved from a high school sophomore shortstop at Pomona to a star pitcher in the majors.

He has a good chance of being the National League's starting pitcher Tuesday. He will have had the proper rest — three days — and his credentials are in order.

Singer's victory was his 13th of the season and he is tied for the NL strikeout lead with 159 after striking out seven Giants. His earned run average is 1.97 and that's the best in the NL among righthanded starters.

Bill Singer, claim Dodger opponents, throws "bullets."

He struck out the first four Giants falling two short of a major league record for strikeouts at the beginning of a game.

"There was some good defense behind me tonight," said Singer. The Dodger defense was outstanding with rookie second baseman Ted Sizemore making two great plays and perhaps a game-saver in the ninth inning.

There also was a save by Jim Brewer, who came on with two outs in the ninth to retire Ron Hunt and gain his 15th save of the season.

The game started with two Dodger bunts for hits and ended with the Giants slugging bombs for outs.

Yanks Lead Russ
Record Breakers

The United States led the team race. Russia led in cheers and the British Commonwealth also participated in an international track and field festival Friday night at the Coliseum.

As competition continues today, with the decathlon at 9 a.m., other events at noon, the Yanks led the Russians, 100-90 in combined men-women scoring. They are in front of the United Kingdom, 108-82. Surprisingly, both U.S. men and women — the latter usually more renowned for their cooking than their athletics — are bellwethers on the computer.

A tiny throng of 15,859 had plenty to cheer about — most of it generated by Russians.

Three all-time bests of U.S. soil were achieved, and for each a son of the Soviet got the credit.

Aleksander Morozov won the 3,000-meter steeplechase in 8:26.0, guillotining the Coliseum record by eight seconds, deadheading the Russian record.

Kerry O'Brien of Australia was nipping at his heels as they reached the final hurdle, but to O'Brien it must have looked like a pole vault bar. When he finally got over, the race was almost over. O'Brien finished in a career best of 8:26.8.

The top two indicated that the world record of 8:24.2 owned by Jouko Kuho of Finland is in dire danger.

Frenn Calls Soviet Rival 'Poor Sport'

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

The cementing of international relations has taken another plastering.

John Carlos and George Frenn regard their Russian track and field rivals with something close to contempt, the Russians' feelings are hurt and the British Commonwealth finds itself caught uncomfortably in the crossfire.

Frenn, Long Beach's commuting hammer thrower, called Russian rival Romauld Klim a "poor sport" for refusing to be interviewed after losing (on second-best throws) to Soviet teammate Anatoly Bondarchuk.

"See what poor sports

Viktor Saneyev toppled the Coliseum record by four inches in the triple jump, soaring 55 feet, 5 3/4 inches. The Americans were five feet to the rear.

In the greatest head-to-head competition of the night, Russian Anatoly Bondarchuk edged Russian Romauld Klim in the hammer throw.

Both dropped the 16-pounder out of the clouds at 237-5, surpassing the Coliseum standard by eight feet. Bondarchuk was judged the winner — his second longest throw was 237-3, Klim's was 236-2. George Frenn of Long Beach was third in a strong 225-11.

The 18-foot pole vault is still a dream.

Bob Seagren won the event at 17-6 1/4, but missed badly at three attempts at 18-1.

Ron Clarke of Australia felt out the field for two laps in the 10,000 meters, then annihilated it. He won in 28:35.4, 15 seconds in front of Nikolay Sviridov. Blisters and exhaustion forced Clarke to withdraw from today's 5,000.

While the Women's 800-meter run was as routine as turning on a light, the men's race was a shocker.

World record holder Ralph Doubell of the British Commonwealth was an overwhelming favorite. If he didn't win, teammate Byron Dyce, U.S. collegiate and AAU champion was sure to.

There was no surprise in the tempo, a blistering 51.0

they are?" Frenn said as he attempted to beckon them into the press area.

"He (Klim) cussed me out and left. He's just angry 'cause he got second."

Later a Russian interpreter claimed that the hammer throwers walked away because there was nobody to meet them, pointing out that their triple jumpers had waited patiently for several minutes to be interviewed but were ignored.

Frenn, who placed third, angrily pooh-poohed that notion.

"Would you believe I had

at 400 meters, established by Felix Johnson of the U.S. He carries a stopwatch in his head, but his finish kick resembles a girl's more closely than a mule's.

Like a giant tow truck, Johnson pulled the field through the final curve. Suddenly Juris Luzins, born in Germany and representing the U.S. for the first time, sprinted into the lead. It was a game of catch-up, and no one could.

Luzins won by five yards. Doubell, displaying none of his Olympic Games finish, edged Johnson by a centimeter for second with a long last stride lean.

Luzins was credited with 1:46.7, Doubell and Johnson 1:47.4.

Olympic champion Madeline Manning of the U.S. won the women's 800 in 2:03.8, leading every step of the way. Alla Kolyesnikova of — you guessed it, Russia — was second, 12 yards back in the dust, at 2:06.0.

The 100-meter sprints, as expected, were American sweeps.

In the women's race, Barbara Ferrell and Iris Davis were out of the blocks so quickly it almost appeared that they jumped the gun. The recall starter didn't challenge and neither did anyone else. Ferrell's 11.5 was one yard swifter than Davis' 11.6.

In the men's 100, national champion Ivory Crockett and world's fastest human John Carlos broke in front. Carlos stretched his long legs, and only Crockett was in the race. Crockett trimmed a two-yard deficit to one, and both eased up in the final yards. They were clocked in 10.3.

Christine Thompson of the United Kingdom won the women's javelin throw at 174 feet, 11 inches. Kathy Schmidt, 15-year-old Wilson High student, was fourth at 169-4, eight feet shy of her winning distance in the national championships.

Yank Kathy Hammond won the women's 400 by eight yards in a Coliseum record 53.0, and Olympic gold medalist Lee Evans won the men's race in 45.3 With 40 yards to victory teammate Tommie Turner closed to within one yard of Evans, but Lee, tougher than a knot in an oak, dug down, found a little more adrenalin, and ran away.

Olympic champion in the decathlon, Bill Toomey, a 30-year-old Santa Barbara school teacher, may be the

NAMATH ENDS RETIREMENT
BY SELLING BAR

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broadway Joe Namath, pro football's swinging Super Bowl hero, ended his retirement from the game Friday by knocking under at last to the order of pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle that he sell his interest in a New York bar said to be frequented by "undesirables."

The announcement, made jointly by Namath and Rozelle, came exactly six weeks after Namath had tearfully announced he was "retiring" rather than how to Rozelle's order.

"Joe and I and professional football have gone through six difficult weeks. We are happy to say that the situation is resolved," said Rozelle.

The "solution" appeared to be entirely on the terms of Rozelle's original order—that Namath sell his interest in Bachelors III.

"We all got a little tired of this situation eventually," said Namath. "I didn't think this would involve as many people as it has, but this thing has gotten completely out of proportion. Because of the people this involved and because I do want to play football, Mr. Rozelle and I got together and resolved this thing by me selling Bachelors III."

Rozelle's order to Namath had been based on the charge by the commissioner's investigations that "undesirable" people had been "frequenting" the East Side New York bar. Pro football has traditionally fought to keep itself clear of any connection with gambling.

In agreeing to do exactly what Rozelle told him to, Namath was emphatic in insisting he doesn't agree with any charges made about the bar.

"I want to stress that I am not doing this because there is anything wrong with Bachelors III," Namath said. "But because of the publicity that it has received and the stories that have circulated about it, Mr. Rozelle and I thought it would be best if I divested myself of my share of the club for the best interest of professional football."

Rozelle said it would be a "clean sale," and that Namath was not selling his interest in the bar to relatives or friends.

A slip of the foot — at least that's the way umpire Art Frantz read it — cost the Angels their longest winning spree of the season Friday night.

It was one of four Anaheim miscues and it led to four unearned runs in the eighth inning and sent Oakland to a 6-3 victory over the Halos at Anaheim stadium.

The Angels were leading at the time, 3-1, heading for their fourth win in a row — a 1969 high. Danny Cater opened the eighth with a single and then Rick Monday bounced one to Jim Spencer at first.

Spencer fired to Jim Fregosi who was covering second. Fregosi took the throw, shuffled his feet and then threw back to first a trifle late to get Monday.

But wait! Second base ump Frantz ruled Cater safe at second, claiming Fregosi missed the bag.

"I slid my back foot over the base," insisted the Angels' All-Star shortstop. "When I switched my feet, I took my time to throw back to first since the pitcher had to cover and well, that's when I must have confused him."

"He tagged the base," agreed Angel skipper Lefty Phillips. "When he switched his feet like he did he confused the ump."

"Jimmy never says much to umpires. This is the first time I've really seen him holler."

Frantz, a rookie arbiter this season in the American League, defended his call after the game. "He missed the base by a foot," he said.

As it was, the A's, still bidding to overtake streaking Minnesota in the A.L. West, ran up four unearned runs, chased Halo starter Jim McGlothlin and sprinted to their sixth win in eight starts this year against the Angels.

Chuck Dobson continued his whammy over Anaheim. The Oakland right-hander brought a string of five consecutive complete games against the Angels into Friday's series opener. If it's any consolation, he was removed after seven innings this time but, as luck would have it, still got the victory, his 11th.

The win is Oakland's eighth in its last nine starts but, even so, the A's have

$159,350 Juvenile Attracts 10 Today

Ten of the fastest youngsters in the thoroughbred ranks race today in the $159,350 Hollywood Juvenile Championship at Hollywood Park with Chicago invader Insubordination the favorite.

The only three-stakes winner in the lineup, Insobordination, carries 122 pounds, the standard weight of all entries, with Laffit Pincay Jr. in the saddle.

Pincay replaces last year's riding champion Angel Cordero who last week was handed a 10-day suspension in New York.

An unofficial morning line listed Insobordination at 5-2 for the six furlongs, first in a series of major confrontations which will determine the nation's 2-year-old champion.

In post position order, the field will line up with Sir Wiggle, Insobordination, Windy Tide, Hanalei Bay, Champagne, With Evidence, Titanium Pie, Sand Canyon, Tin Mat and Cupid's Wings.

Tin Mat also comes from Chicago in the attempt to whip the Western youngsters.

Don Pierce, the meet's leading jockey, goes on Sir Wiggle and Milo Valenzuela on San Canyon, both colts hailing from the barn of Bob Wheeler but not coupled in the wagering since they have different owners.

Danny Velasquez rides Cupid's Wings, coming off an injury, and also having to break from the outside of the 10-horse field.

With Evidence, ridden by Bill Mahorney, could be the toughest competition for Insobordination. Owned by Rex Ellsworth, the strapping chestnut colt was only a neck back of the Chicagoan at the close of the recent Portola Stakes.

Rudy Rosales, in booting favored Windsor Tide to a half-length triumph in the fourth race Friday, established a Hollywood single season win record for an apprentice rider.

The victory, Rosales' second of the day, was his 62nd of the season. It tops the old record of 61, set in 1941 by Ferrell Zufelt.

Amber Velvet, a daughter of Fleet Nasrullah who hadn't won in a year or raced in 10 months, won an easy victory in Friday's feature.

With Bill Mahorney in the saddle, the 4-year-old won by four lengths over Psychologist.

Amber Velvet paid $5, $4.40 and $3.60. Psychologist paid $13.40 and $7.60 and Free Sample paid $7.40.

YONKERS, N.Y. — Gun Runner and Dayan are expected to stage a repeat performance of their thrilling race of a week ago in the $100,000 Yonkers Futurity Trot at Yonkers Raceway tonight.

7 GO IN BARDELLA TONIGHT Rockette Upset in Shue Fly

Top Rockette has to be the hard-luck horse of the Los Alamitos quarter racing season as she was upset by Dividend's Bar in the $8,000 Shue Fly Friday evening.

It took the fastest clocking of the meeting at 350 yards as Dividend's Bar was a head in front at the wire, being timed in 17.7 seconds.

Another three-quarters of a length back of Top Rockette was Ettabo.

The loss by Top Rockette was her fourth of the meeting, all by a neck or less behind the winner. In the four events, she has posted two seconds and two thirds.

Charlie Smith was aboard the winner, which was somewhat overlooked in the wagering by the crowd of 10,356, with the prices across the board being $18.40, $8 and $4.20. Top Rockette paid $3.40 and $2.60, while Ettabo returned $4.

John Watson was the riding hero of the night with a triple, scoring with Taggar Bar ($7) in the third, Go Lamb ($11.60) in the fourth and Rocket Injun ($6.40) in the seventh.

The top two-year-olds racing at Los Alamitos this summer will begin to eliminate themselves this evening when seven juveniles clash in the $7,000 Bardella at 350 yards.

Whereas Kaweah Bar quickly established himself as the best two-year-old in 1968, that is not the case this year. At the moment, four of them are sharing top honors—Nutter Brother, Barred's Rocket, Whataway To Go and Kaweah Bar Top.

The latter pair will battle it out tonight in the Bardella, each being undefeated at the track.

GLASS CHAPEL GIVES REV. ROBERT LORING YOUNG A CLEAR VIEW OF THE WORLD'S PROBLEMS

Glass Chapel: Eye to Universe

By CAROLYN RUSZ
Rev. Robert Loring Young doesn't look at the world through rose-colored glasses; he looks at it through his glass chapel.
An effervescent man full of opinions on nearly everything, the talkative theologian is minister of Wayfarers' Chapel in Portuguese Bend, coincidentally the only Swedenborgian church in the Long Beach area.

Scientists Believers, Says Dr. Billy Graham

MOONSHOT, From B-5

God and His relations to mankind and to the universe. The thought behind such questions, I assume, implies that if science can perform such miracles, of what further use is God. Quickly I must say that any moon landing or any other human achievement anywhere in the universe can only be, in my view, another tribute to the greatness and glory of our Creator. Remember that first verse of Genesis as it came to us last Christmas from the moon-bound Apollo 8 — "In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth." It should have reminded us forever that God reigns everywhere. Nature — the entire universe — is His abode. The achievements of science do not circumscribe or diminish Him; Instead, they glorify Him through the accomplishments of men ordered by Him to "subdue the earth." Many men of science agree. Scores of them attend the First Baptist Church of Merritt Island, adjacent to Cape Kennedy. The Reverend Adrian Rogers, pastor, says that 71 of his members, many scientists among them, have dedicated their lives to full-time Christian work. A minister visiting Oak Ridge, Tennessee, found that 50 atomic scientists were on the rolls of one church, with 75 more attending another. Lord Kelvin, the great English scientist, said: "If you think strongly enough, you will be forced by science to believe in God." Engineer Walter F. Burke, who managed the Mercury and Gemini programs, says: "Some people are saying God is dead, but it is not the scientists who are saying it. I have never met a scientist who considered himself an atheist." Another question often asked is, "would you like to go to the moon?" I would not! I want to go where there is life. God is life! I want to go where I can meet some of God's creatures. Perhaps life exists on Mars. At its closest approach, it is still 34,000,000 miles away. Yes, I'd like to go to Mars! What would I find there? I have no idea; The Bible does not say. But it is hard to believe that we earthlings are alone in this spacious and wonderful universe. Already we have received visits by creatures from space, including many angels and Jesus Christ. The Bible says that angels appeared to Abraham, Moses, Elijah, and many others. An angel saved the life of Daniel in the lion's den when he "shut the lion's mouth, and they have not hurt me." When Peter was in chains and in prison, an angel came to him, smote him on the side and lifted him up, saying: "Arise up quickly." And Peter's chains fell off.

Lively Pastor Is Top Swedenborgian

es, so the difference is not as great," he added. "However, some Protestant churches still call us heretics because we do not believe that a person must be a Christian to be saved. We follow what Jesus said: 'Man is saved by his deeds, not his beliefs.'"

Barrett Browning and Samuel Taylor Coleridge. "The Swedenborgian Church does not place any restrictions on a person's private life. We teach the love of God and concern for others, but a person's actions must be judged by his own conscience. "The church tries not to speak for its members on current social issues. Although I oppose war myself, I have voted against several peace resolutions at our conventions, because I believe such statements must come from the people, not meaningless resolutions by the church," he said.

Rev. Young's two oldest sons are conscientious objectors, but had difficulty getting their CO status because the Swedenborgian church has made no statement against the war. "Many young people are having similar problems. Although they have spiritual backgrounds and are against war, they do not belong to any church," he said.

Many Swedenborgians do not belong to any specific church, or they may follow the teachings of Swedenborg while maintaining membership in another church. The early Swedenborgians were Episcopalians and Methodists. Among noted Swedenborgians were Helen Keller, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Thomas Carlyle, Henry James, Elizabeth

Did you know that the earth is apparently the only planet in the entire universe that is in rebellion? Else, why did God send his son to us? But because God loved us so much, and saw and understood the trouble we were in, he sent Jesus to us so that if we would believe in him as our Saviour, accepting Him on faith, He would forgive our sins and we could escape from our chains, just like Paul.

For almost 2,000 years, millions of persons all over the world have done exactly this. During that period the laws of science have changed dozens of times. God's law never changes. Irrespective of who lands on the moon, or when, Christians are citizens of two worlds, one is called earth, the other is called heaven.

NAVY CHAPLAIN AT SITE OF FIRST BAPTISM
Lt. (jg) Peter Pilarski Will Relive History

First Baptism Re-enacted

CAMP PENDLETON — The first Christian baptism performed in California 200 years ago will be reenacted at 3 p.m. Tuesday at Camp Pendleton.

His excellency, Francis J. Furey, Bishop of San Diego and six other priests will concelebrate a mass at the site to commemorate the event of two centuries ago.

Father Francisco Gomez and Father Juan Crespi, two Franciscan missionaries who accompanied the Portola Expedition in 1769, baptized two Indian children at a site now located between Camps San Mateo and Tulega near the northern border of the reservation.

A historical marker now distinguishes the location. According to Father Crespi's diary, the party set out on the morning of the 22nd and a few hours later entered what is known today as Christians Canyon. Here the explorers made camp and were immediately approached by a group of friendly Indians.

Reports of two sick Indian girls came to the Padres from the expedition's scouts. Father Crespi and Father Gomez then proceeded to the Indian village and performed the historical baptisms.

For this reason the soldiers named the valley Los Christianos and the name remains today.

The classes will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Children, three through 17 years old, will participate in arts, crafts and Bible study, while the adults attend discussions on Christianity and world problems.

Solemn Mass Celebrated at St. Cyprian's

A Solemn Mass of Thanksgiving to God for the continued success of Apollo lunar flight will be celebrated by Rev. Justin MacCarthy at St. Cyprian's church, 4700 Clark Ave., Long Beach, at 10 a.m. Monday.

An invitation is extended to members of all religious denominations to join with the parishioners of St. Cyprian's in a fellowship of prayerful rejoicing.

FROM THE PULPIT

"And daily in the temple and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ." The success of any new testament church will depend upon the personal witnessing of its members. Christians are not asked to be witnesses — they are witnesses. "He shall be my witness." How much then do you know about this aspect of your life?

Beginning Sunday, July 27, and continuing every Sunday through the 2nd of August, Dr. Porter Brinkman will conduct a series of Bible studies. The lectures are designed to teach Christians how to lead people to Christ.

Dr. Brinkman is well known throughout Southern California as a pastor, evangelist, author, and Bible teacher. You will want to set this week aside for the receiving of this vital instruction.

Scientists Believers, Says Dr. Billy Graham

MOONSHOT, From B-5

God and His relations to mankind and to the universe. The thought behind such questions, I assume, implies that if science can perform such miracles, of what further use is God.

Quickly I must say that any moon-landing or any other human achievement anywhere in the universe can only be, in my view, another tribute to the greatness and glory of our Creator. Remember that first verse of Genesis as it came to us last Christmas from the moon-bound Apollo 8? — "In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth." It should have reminded us forever that God reigns everywhere. Nature — the entire universe — is His abode. The achievements of science do not circumscribe or diminish Him; Instead, they glorify Him through the accomplishments of men ordered by Him to "subdue the earth."

Many men of science agree. Scores of them attend the First Baptist Church of Merritt Island, adjacent to Cape Kennedy. The Reverend Adrian Rogers, pastor, says that 71 of his members, many scientists among them, have dedicated their lives to full-time Christian work.

A minister visiting Oak Ridge, Tennessee, found that 50 atomic scientists were on the rolls of one church, with 75 more attending another.

Lord Kelvin, the great English scientist, said: "If you think strongly enough, you will be forced by science to believe in God."

Engineer Walter F. Burke, who managed the

Mercury and Gemini programs, says: "Some people are saying God is dead, but it is not the scientists who are saying it. I have never met a scientist who considered himself an atheist."

Another question often asked is, "would you like to go to the moon?" I would not! I want to go where there is life. God is life! I want to go where I can meet some of God's creatures. Perhaps life exists on Mars. At its closest approach, it is still 34,000,000 miles away. Yes, I'd like to go to Mars!

What would I find there? I have no idea; The Bible does not say. But it is hard to believe that we earthlings are alone in this spacious and wonderful universe. Already we have received visits by creatures from space, including many angels and Jesus Christ. The Bible says that angels appeared to Abraham, Moses, Elijah, and many others. An angel saved the life of Daniel in the lion's den when he "shut the lion's mouth, and they have not hurt me." When Peter was in chains and in prison, an angel came to him, smote him on the side and lifted him up, saying: "Arise up quickly." And Peter's chains fell off.

Did you know that the earth is apparently the only planet in the entire universe that is in rebellion? Else, why did God send his son to us? But because God loved us so much, and saw and understood the trouble we were in, he sent Jesus to us so that if we would believe in him as our Saviour, accepting Him on faith, He would forgive our sins and we could escape from our chains, just like Paul.

For almost 2,000 years, millions of persons all over the world have done exactly this. During that period the laws of science have changed dozens of times. God's law never changes. Irrespective of who lands on the moon, or when, Christians are citizens of two worlds, one is called earth, the other is called heaven.

NAVY CHAPLAIN AT SITE OF FIRST BAPTISM
Lt. (jg) Peter Pilarski Will Relive History

First Baptism Re-enacted

CAMP PENDLETON — The first Christian baptism performed in California 200 years ago will be reenacted at 3 p.m. Tuesday at Camp Pendleton.

His excellency, Francis J. Furey, Bishop of San Diego and six other priests will concelebrate a mass at the site to commemorate the event of two centuries ago.

Father Francisco Gomez and Father Juan Crespi, two Franciscan missionaries who accompanied the Portola Expedition in 1769, baptized two Indian children at a site now located between Camps San Mateo and Talega near the northern border of the reservation.

A historical marker now distinguishes the location.

According to Father Crespi's diary, the party set out on the morning of the 22nd and a few hours later entered what is known today as Christians Canyon. Here the explorers made camp and were immediately approached by a group of friendly Indians.

Reports of two sick Indian girls came to the Padres from the expedition's scouts. Father Crespi and Father Gomez then proceeded to the Indian village and performed the historical baptisms.

For this reason the soldiers named the valley Los Christianos and the name remains today.

Solemn Mass Celebrated at St. Cyprian's

A Solemn Mass of Thanksgiving to God for the continued success of Apollo lunar flight will be celebrated by Rev. Justin MacCarthy at St. Cyprian's church, 4700 Clark Ave., Long Beach, at 10 a.m. Monday.

An invitation is extended to members of all religious denominations to join with the parishioners of St. Cyprian's in a fellowship of prayerful rejoicing.

FROM THE PULPIT

"And daily in the temple and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ." The success of any New Testament church will depend upon the personal witnessing of its members. Christians are not asked to be witnesses — they are witnesses. "Ye shall be my witnesses." How much then do you know about this aspect of your life?

Beginning Sunday, July 27, and continuing every evening through the 3rd of August, Dr. Porter Barrington will conduct a seminar on Soul Winning. The lectures are designed to teach Christians how to lead people to Christ.

Dr. Barrington is well known throughout Southern California as a pastor, evangelist, author, and Bible teacher. You will want to set this week aside for the receiving of this vital instruction.

REVEREND FRED NEWKIRK AND CO.
He Presides Over Pre-school Summer Session at First Friends Church

—Staff Photo

AT FIRST FRIENDS CHURCH

He Makes Things Happen

By PRESTON REECE
Staff Writer

"It is the property of true genius to disturb settled ideas." The serigraph by Sister Mary Carita hangs on the wall of the tiny office allocated to the pastor of First Friends Church.

Rev. Fred H. Newkirk, occupant of that office, came to Long Beach two years ago after serving his first ministry in Vancouver, Wash., which he describes as "a small suburban community with a multitude of services rendered to its citizens, including the convenience of a clean suburban brick church around every corner."

"The self-contained atmosphere of that city made it seem so apart from everything. Many of my parishioners never even had any contact with a member of a minority group," Newkirk said.

Guided by a strong social conscience, Newkirk accepted pastorship of an inner-city Long Beach church. But he found it confining because he was "limited only as far as the parish community, rather than the total community outside, which was where the real work needed doing."

At First Friends Church, one of Newkirk's projects was to establish a child day care center, in the church basement, for families whose income level was just above the qualifying level for the Head Start Program. Staffed by volunteers, the center is being conducted throughout the summer. Newkirk also coordinates an annual weekend camping trip for needy boys.

Community work, at the present time, is but a sideline in relation to the inner-church duties Newkirk must perform as pastor. The ideal solution was a merger of the two, community and church.

Newkirk now is formulating plans for a new ministry, to be conducted in the city's central area, where he makes his home. This new ministry will allow him to expand work in the community on an ecumenical basis, also providing access to those who have become disenchanted with religion. "People are easily alienated by the church today, which has become an institution — four walls, a cross, rigid dogma, and a minister. It's just another big business, concerned with supporting itself rather than spreading the teachings of Christ.

"It has taken the individuality from its members. They've become units. Maybe that's why ministers spend so much time praying for their congregation's health, so that those dollars will keep rolling in."

More thoughts:

"The clergy and laity as well have become too defensive of the church as an institution, and too dependent on its traditions. That's why we've lost so many young people."

Newkirk refuses to plan a format for his new ministry or even establish a set location in which to conduct it.

"It is important that the format be decided upon by the worshipping community — something flexible enough as to complement the tempo of those in attendance."

"The church should be a mobile, fluid group, like that of the disciples, not a properly-oriented granite wall. I think it's time we returned to the simplicity that Christ taught."

A step toward that simplicity, Newkirk says, would be meetings held in private homes, where worshippers would feel free to personally interpret the scriptures, and share with one another their own individual commitment to Christ.

The ministry, which will begin in September, will have as its ecumenical board the governing bodies of the California Yearly Meeting of Friends and St. Luke's Episcopal Church to oversee its various programs and projects.

CONFIDENT LIVING

Human Nature Is an Eternal Thing

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

As they say, times come and go. Certainly over the centuries fantastic changes have taken place on this Earth.

It wasn't so very long ago that the horse and buggy was considered the most modern, stylish means of getting from one place to another. Now we regard it almost as humdrum when we send a human being into outer space and actually observe him spiraling around the globe at 18,000 miles an hour in a vehicle of incredible technological complexity.

Yet, for all the changes we have witnessed, one thing does not change. And that is human nature. Life today, as it was thousands of years ago, is still a question of man meeting the challenge of his environment and man battling with himself. If he fails to win the battle of self-mastery, whatever victory he may achieve elsewhere leaves him inwardly dissatisfied and often yields nothing but bitter fruit in the end.

And the key to self-mastery is courage. The Latin poet, Ovid, observed that courage conquers all things. And hundreds of years later, a French essayist reaffirmed this declaration by calling courage the strongest, most generous, and proudest of all the virtues.

A friend of mine a while ago came across an interesting relic of the Old West — the last will and testament of a rugged frontiersman. It was crudely made, but left a great legacy to his son. "This here," he wrote, "is my last will and testament. I ain't got no money to leave you, nothing, exceptin' our old cabin, Old Buck (which was probably his horse) and my two guns. But I do leave you somethin' worth a parcel more than money:

One: A man's word that is as good as his bond

Two: Faith in God

Three: Courage so you won't be afraid of nothin' or nobody."

HONESTY, faith and courage! What a priceless legacy that is! Euripides said that courage can be taught, as a child is taught to speak. And I rather think that is just what the frontiersman was trying to say. His example would serve his son better than a pouch full of gold, and he was right.

While a parent's good influence can help a child acquire courage, it is not the whole story by a long shot. What we do as his example, is critical. How much courage can we show?

All of human experience tells us that the way of courage is to think courage constantly, and to act with courage in everything we undertake.

This holds true for the little things in life as well as the big things. We need courage to pay our debts promptly when we're tempted to stall our creditors. We need courage to look for a new job when something inside tells us that the old job had become unrewarding. We need courage in disciplining ourselves at the dinner table in turning down that second helping of dessert. We need courage to cut down on our workload and spend more time with our wives and children.

None of us has perfect intelligence, but we must exercise all the intelligence we have to make the most of courage. We must be careful not to equate impetuosity with courage. AT FIRST FRIENDS CHURCH

He Makes Things Happen

By PRESTON REECE
Staff Writer

"It is the property of true genius to disturb settled ideas." The serigraph by Sister Mary Corita hangs on the wall of the tiny office allocated to the pastor of First Friends Church.

Rev. Fred H. Newkirk, occupant of that office, came to Long Beach two years ago after serving his first ministry in Vancouver, Wash., which he describes as "a small suburban community with a multitude of services rendered to its citizens, including the convenience of a clean suburban brick church around every corner."

The self-contained atmosphere of that city made it "seem so apart from everything. Many of my parishioners never even had any contact with a member of a minority group," Newkirk said.

Guided by a strong social conscience, Newkirk accepted pastorship of an inner-city Long Beach church. But he found it confining because he was "limited only as far as the parish community, rather than the total community outside, which was where the real work needed doing."

At First Friends Church, one of Newkirk's projects was to establish a child day care center, in the church basement, for families whose income level was just above the qualifying level for the Head Start Program. Staffed by volunteers, the center is being conducted throughout the summer. Newkirk also coordinates an annual weekend camping trip for needy boys.

Community work, at the present time, is but a sideline in relation to the inner-church duties Newkirk must perform as pastor. The ideal solution was a merger of the two, community and church.

Newkirk now is formulating plans for a new ministry, to be conducted in the city's central area, where he makes his home. This new ministry will allow him to expand work in the community on an ecumenical basis, also providing access to those who have become disenchanted with religion. "People are easily alienated by the church today, which has become an institution — four walls, a cross, rigid dogma, and a minister. It's just another big business, concerned with supporting itself rather than spreading the teachings of Christ.

"It has taken the individuality from its members. They've become units. Maybe that's why ministers spend so much time praying for their congregation's health, so that those dollars will keep rolling in."

More thoughts: "The clergy and laity as well have become too defensive of the church as an institution, and too dependent on its traditions. That's why we've lost so many young people."

Newkirk refuses to plan a format for his new ministry or even establish a set location in which to conduct it.

"It is important that the format be decided upon by the worshipping community — something flexible enough as to complement the tempo of those in attendance."

"The church should be a mobile, fluid group, like that of the disciples, not a properly-oriented granite wall. I think it's time we returned to the simplicity that Christ taught."

A step toward that simplicity, Newkirk says, would be meetings held in private homes, where worshippers would feel free to personally interpret the scriptures, and share with one another their own individual commitment to Christ.

The ministry, which will begin in September, will have as its ecumenical board the governing bodies of the California Yearly Meeting of Friends and St. Luke's Episcopal Church to oversee its various programs and projects.

CONFIDENT LIVING

Human Nature Is an Eternal Thing

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

As they say, times come and go. Certainly over the centuries fantastic changes have taken place on this Earth.

It wasn't so very long ago that the horse and buggy was considered the most modern, stylish means of getting from one place to another. Now we regard it almost as humdrum when we send a human being into outer space and actually observe him spiraling around the globe at 18,000 miles an hour in a vehicle of incredible technological complexity.

Yet, for all the changes we have witnessed, one thing does not change. And that is human nature. Life today, as it was thousands of years ago, is still a question of man meeting the challenge of his environment and man battling with himself. If he fails to win the battle of self-mastery, whatever victory he may achieve elsewhere leaves him inwardly dissatisfied and often yields nothing but bitter fruit in the end.

And the key to self-mastery is courage. The Latin poet, Ovid, observed that courage conquers all things. And hundreds of years later, a French essayist reaffirmed this declaration by calling courage the strongest, most generous, and proudest of all the virtues.

A friend of mine a while ago came across an interesting relic of the Old West — the last will and testament of a rugged frontiersman. It was crudely made, but left a great legacy to his son. "This here," he wrote, "is my last will and testament. I ain't got no money to leave you, nothing, exceptin' our old cabin, Old Buck (which was probably his horse) and my two guns. But I do leave you somethin' worth a parcel more than money:

One: A man's word that

Two: Faith in God

Three: Courage so you won't be afraid of nothin' or nobody."

HONESTY, faith and courage! What a priceless legacy that is! Euripides said that courage can be taught, as a child is taught to speak. And I rather think that is just what the frontiersman was trying to say. His example would serve his son better than a pouch full of gold, and he was right.

While a parent's good influence can help a child acquire courage, it is not the whole story by a long shot. What we do as his example, is critical. How much courage can we show?

All of human experience tells us that the way of courage is to think courage constantly, and to act with courage in everything we undertake.

This holds true for the little things in life as well as the big things. We need courage to pay our debts promptly when we're tempted to stall our creditors. We need courage to look for a new job when something inside tells us that the old job had become unrewarding. We need courage in disciplining ourselves at the dinner table in turning down that second helping of dessert. We need courage to cut down on our workload and spend more time with our wives and children.

None of us has perfect intelligence, but we must exercise all the intelligence we have to make the most of courage. We must be careful not to equalize impetuosity with courage. Decisions should be thought through carefully and, when the proper alternative has been chosen, only then must we proceed forthrightly and unhesitatingly.

Goldiggers Put the Show Over

By GEORGE ERES
TV-Radio Editor

If it weren't for the zesty young people who perform in a professionally mounted production, "The Goldiggers," the summer fill-in for Dean Martin Thursday nights on Ch. 4 wouldn't be worth writing home about.

The 12 young girls, known as "The Goldiggers," aren't replacement material at all — they're as fresh and delightful as anything you'll find on TV any time of the year.

There were some additional youngsters who made the opening of "The Goldiggers" about the only new thing worth watching this summer in the variety field. A trio of young performers — Tommy Tune, Danny Lockin, Joyce Ames, and one of the "Goldiggers," Paula Chin, did a show-stopping dance and song routine.

TUNE is a tall, skinny young song and dance man whose various parts seem to be joined together on the ball and socket principal rather than the way we normal mortals are connected.

Tune's obvious talents have not gone unnoticed. He and Lockin both dance in the film production of "Hello Dolly," and I imagine all of these youngsters will be around for a while.

Singer Lou Rawls fit in well with the proceedings, but I'm not so sure about a few better known names, Stanley Myron Handelman, Paul Lynde and Gail Martin. The contributions of the latter were minimal and Lynde's offerings were for the most part something old, something blue.

LYNDE's forte is mugging — his comically exaggerated facial responses to situations — but with the critical mess of his material he's got trouble holding the fort.

Handelman is at his best in the monologue. Putting him in skits and blackouts seems to me a waste of his peculiar talent for floundering about in his improbable world in which he manages a pushcart and fantasizes himself as the business fifth of the owner of Saks Fifth Ave.

Even if it means slowing down the pace a bit, I'd rather hear him tell about his impossible dreams than participate in second rate blackouts. His story about two female ostriches, chased by two amorous male ostriches would have been funnier than most of the dialogue on the show.

The story? On these two ostriches were being pursued and finally gave up and stuck their heads in the sand. The male ostriches pull up and one says to the other: "Where'd they go?"

Still, I imagine I'll be back next Thursday night — if only to delight in the joyful dancing and singing of "The Goldiggers."

Goldiggers Put the Show Over

By GEORGE ERES
TV-Radio Editor

If it weren't for the zesty young people who perform in a professionally mounted production, "The Goldiggers," the summer fill-in for Dean Martin Thursday nights on Ch. 4 wouldn't be worth writing home about.

The 12 young girls, known as "The Goldiggers," aren't replacement material at all — they're as fresh and delightful as anything you'll find on TV any time of the year.

There were some additional youngsters who made the opening of "The Goldiggers" about the only new thing worth watching this summer in the variety field. A trio of young performers — Tommy Tune, Danny Lockin, Joyce Ames, and one of the "Goldiggers," Paula Chinko, did a show-stopping dance and song routine.

TUNE is a tall, skinny young song and dance man whose various parts seem to be joined together on the ball and socket principal rather than the way we normal mortals are connected.

Tune's obvious talents have not gone unnoticed. He and Lockin both dance in the film production of "Hello Dolly," and I imagine all of these youngsters will be around for a while.

Singer Lou Rawls fit in well with the proceedings, but I'm not so sure about a few better known names, Stanley Myron Handelman, Paul Lynde and Gail Martin. The contributions of the latter were minimal and Handelman and Lynde's offerings were for the most part something old, something blue.

LYNDE's forte is mugging — his comically exaggerated facial responses to situations — but with the critical mess of his material he's got trouble holding the fort.

Handelman is at his best in the monologue. Putting him in skits and blackouts seems to me a waste of his peculiar talent for floundering about in his improbable world in which he manages a pushcart and fantasizes himself as the business equal of the owner of Saks Fifth Ave.

Fair Housing Fund Foes Ask Early Report

By DON BRACKENBURY Staff Writer

The six councilmen who voted against the $25,000 allocation to the Fair Housing Foundation informally asked City Manager John R. Mansell Friday to bring in his report on the foundation Tuesday.

The councilmen, lingering in chambers after adjournment of the city's final budget session, discussed the Fair Housing Foundation request, and indicated they felt their actions had been misinterpreted.

"I am not opposed to giving this money," said Councilman Wayne B. Sharp. "I am opposed to giving it with no strings attached."

Mansell told the group his recommendation was that he be authorized to negotiate a contract with the foundation, spelling out controls over expenditure of the city funds.

"All he wants to do is negotiate with them," said Councilman Bert Bond.

Mansell emphasized he still favors allocating $25,000 to the foundation, which conducts a program to find housing for minority families who can afford the payments, but who are rejected on racial grounds.

Last Wednesday, the council voted 6-to-3 to put $25,000 into the unappropriated reserve, from which it could be allocated as the council should decide.

Councilmen Raymond C. Kealer and Thomas J. Clark, who voted to grant the foundation's request, were not present at Friday's budget session.

Mayor Edwin W. Wade, the third councilman voting for the allocation, presided at the budget session, but left when it adjourned.

The other six councilmen remained in the chamber and discussed the situation. Because the meeting had been adjourned, they had no authority to act, and could only suggest Mansell bring in his report Tuesday.

Mansell is expected to repeat his recommendation that he be authorized to negotiate a contract with the foundation. The contract then would come back to the council for approval.

Councilman Paul R. Deats said he still opposes giving public money to the private organization for such a purpose, but said he felt the Council should make a prompt decision on the question.

"Whichever way we go, we ought to make a decision," Deats said.

Deats commended the volunteer workers of the foundation for their "dedication," but said he felt the work should remain on a volunteer basis.

Councilman Emmet M. Sullivan suggested it might be wise to "let it cool off," but Deats replied, "I don't think it's going to cool off; it's going to build up."

Poverty Leader Must Back Up Claims Tuesday

By GEORGE LAINE Staff Writer

Carl P. Wallace, embattled director of the Long Beach Community Action Project, will be asked for a complete explanation about portions of his resume Tuesday during a special meeting of the executive board of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities.

Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, CEO board chairman, said Friday she called the emergency meeting to give the 41-year-old Wallace an opportunity to respond to charges questioning his fitness to run the city's "poverty war."

"I think Tuesday will be a turning point for us one way or another," she said. "I've asked Carl to show us enough respect to tell us what these things are all about."

THE "THINGS" MRS. MOORE REFERRED TO are Wallace's claims he earned a bachelor of arts degree at College (now University) of the Pacific, played defensive halfback for the San Diego Chargers when they were in Los Angeles, and completed a graduate class in telecommunications at USC.

The San Francisco headquarters of the Office of Economic Opportunity said Friday it will send staff representatives to Long Beach Tuesday to review the Wallace situation.

One OEO staffer, Maureen Lyon, is in the area, and a second, Howard Williams, said he will arrive Tuesday.

"One of the things which is a specific requirement of all OEO agencies is full and open disclosure of employee backgrounds," Williams said.

"We could probably advise the Long Beach commission that this would apply to their agency."

Most members of the executive committee told the Independent, Press-Telegram they agreed with Mrs. Moore's decision to call the special meeting.

"IF YOU'RE GOING TO RUN AN OEO PROGRAM," said Rev. William Dummer, "you should run it the way the OEO says."

Mrs. Dorothy Peete said only the Apollo 11 holiday kept the meeting from being called Monday. She characterized it as a "produce or else" meeting.

Maurice Bugbee, while maintaining he had an "open mind" on the charges, said he felt "any statements made on the man's resume ought to be provable."

Mrs. Mae Mack, vacationing in Chicago, told the I.P.T. "I feel like Elizabeth does. I think she's doing the right thing, trying to get it cleared up."

Mrs. Cora Cocks said she felt Tuesday's meeting wouldn't hurt the city's poverty programs, and might even serve to strengthen the overall concept.

Marvin Tinscher and Jack O'Neil said they had not been notified about the emergency meeting and could not discuss it until they were. Mrs. Frances Blanco was not available for comment.

MRS. MOORE SAID SHE RECEIVED a number of telephone calls about the Wallace situation Friday, and weighed her action carefully before calling the meeting.

"Finally," she said, "I decided what I had to do. It's going to be all Carl's show on Tuesday. I hope he's a good performer because no one will be talking for him."

She indicated Wallace, who lives in Altadena, will be given every opportunity to clear himself. But, she emphasized, it must be on his own.

"I'm not fighting for any person in this matter," she said. "I'm not fighting for Carl Wallace or any board member, or even for me. I'm fighting for this poverty program."

L.B. Teen Magicians Win San Jose Honors

By BILL GAGNON Staff Writer

A teen-aged Long Beach team reached into their bag of tricks at the recent Pacific Coast Association of Magicians' convention in San Jose, and walked off with some of the top awards.

For 18-year-old Paul Fidler, 321 W. Hill St., it was just a matter of the hand being quicker than the eye — since his prestidigitation won him his fourth consecutive "Best Magician on the West Coast" award.

Not to be outdone, Fidler's attractive and charming 18-year-old assistant, Patty Long, of 2782 Eucalyptus Ave., also "got into the act" and won similar honors in the ladies' division.

As a team, Patty and Paul won top honors with their "Fascination in Birdland" routine, in which they make white doves and various-color parakeets appear, then vanish in a wink.

Paul, a student at California State College at Long Beach, and Patty, a student at L.B. City College, have been working together since both were freshmen students at St. Anthony's High School.

Both are majoring in theater.

As magicians, the youngsters have appeared in such places as the Hollywood Bowl, Disneyland, Long Beach Auditorium and the Anaheim Convention Center.

In addition to her ability as a magician, Patty has other assets which won her first place in a beauty contest sponsored by Amvets Post 40, and a chance to compete in the state-wide "Miss Amvets" beauty contest at the Statler-Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles.

$56,999,155 L.B. Budget Adopted

The final 1969-70 budget for the City of Long Beach, calling for expenditure of $56,999,155 for tax-supported activities, was adopted Friday by the City Council.

The budget is $497,858 over the recommendations of City Manager John R. Mansell, primarily because of additional pay raises granted city workers by councilmen.

Mansell earlier reported it appeared his budget could be financed with the same tax rate as last year, $1.4363 per $100 of assessed valuation, but it now appears the rate will go up about two cents.

COUNCILMEN also gave first reading to an ordinance which will raise the monthly fee for refuse collection by about 50 per cent, effective Sept. 1.

Residential charges for refuse collection will be raised from $1 to $1.50 for single-family dwellings, from 90 cents to $1.35 per unit for duplexes, and from 75 cents to $1.15 per unit for apartment buildings.

Commercial charges are based on the number of 50-gallon containers being used. For two such containers, the rate goes from $1 to $1.50. From 3 to 5 containers, the rate climbs from $2.65 to $3.65. Increases will be effected up to 20 containers. Above that figure, there will be no change in the fee.

TOTAL CITY expenditures, including the self-supporting Harbor, Gas and Water departments, will total $148.7 million, which is $11.2 million greater than Mansell's preliminary budget figure.

Virtually all of the added cost, however, results from the inclusion in the Harbor Department budget of $10 million to cover cost of developing a container terminal facility, if negotiations for such a project are completed. The money actually would be raised by revenue bonds.

The council salary adjustments, which principally involved making the recommended pay raises for city workers effective July 1 instead of Aug. 1, as Mansell proposed, will cost $388,646.

ALLOCATIONS for community events and overtime required for Monday's special holiday because of the Apollo 11 flight will bring the council-approved increase in the general purpose fund to $472,796.

The exact city tax rate will not be known until after assessed valuations are submitted.

The city's assessment roll must be completed before the end of July, and the State Board of Equalization will give the city assessments on public utilities by mid-August.

Councilmen will sit as a board of equalization in early August to hear appeals from property owners who believe their assessment improper.

The city auditor must set the tax rate by the last Monday in August.

FAMILIAR BANDIT Lakewood Store Robbed of $20,000

By BILL HOMER Staff Writer

A pint-sized bandit fled from a Lakewood supermarket Friday with an estimated $20,000.

The "squat" 5-foot 3-inch gunman — believed involved in a dozen or more supermarket stickups during the past two years — staged his latest robbery just minutes after an armored truck made a cash delivery to Lucky Stores Market, 4601 Silva St.

A stolen car, in which the mustachioed bandit made his get-away, was found abandoned a short distance from the store.

Detective Sgt. Gary Graves of the sheriff's robbery detail, said the late model car was reported stolen July 2 from Fullerton.

Wearing a white construction-type hard hat, sunglasses, light clothing and brandishing a sub-compact .38-caliber revolver, the bandit lived the store manager, 37-year-old William Sutherland, into the cashier's cage occupied by Mrs. Emma Follansby, 51.

A dozen customers shopped in the market, unaware of the holdup taking place in the nearby cage.

Sgt. Graves said the gunman who was short, with black hair and brown eyes, is believed to be the same bandit who robbed an Alhambra-area store of $3,000 at gunpoint May 9, and the man responsible for at least 11 stickups in various Los Angeles County locations.

He said the robberies have been occurring at a rate of about one every two months.

PEREIRA GETS ORANGE AIRPORT STRIP CONTRACT

Brushing aside a demand that work contracts be "spread around," Orange County supervisors have voted to hire William C. Pereira to engineer new taxi strips and parking pads at Orange County Airport.

Four engineering firms were recommended last week as qualified for the job design. Pereira was one of them, but Supervisor Robert W. Battin of Santa Ana insisted that Pereira had too many jobs already and that this one should go to Larry Bivens of Orange.

The job could cost about $330,000. It will be financed equally by the county and the federal government.

Supervisors authorized an application to the Federal Aviation Agency for funds.

Drive-in Operator Asks Loiter Law

The owner of a drive-in restaurant joined Friday the growing demand that the city crack down on "teen-age and young adult hoodlums" who use such establishments as hang-outs.

"I have had my employees threatened, physically injured and harassed to the point where it is almost impossible to hire anyone to work," declared Leonard E. Raught.

Raught, who said he owns eating places at 5476 Del Amo Blvd. and 4901 Long Beach Blvd., urged the City Council to adopt an ordinance similar to the City of Lakewood which "prohibits loitering and congregating in groups on private property."

"During the last three years, I have had nothing but trouble from the groups of teen-age and young adult hoodlums who converge upon the property," Raught said.

"They use profanity, race cars and motorcycles up and down the parking area, and are either under the influence of dope or alcohol."

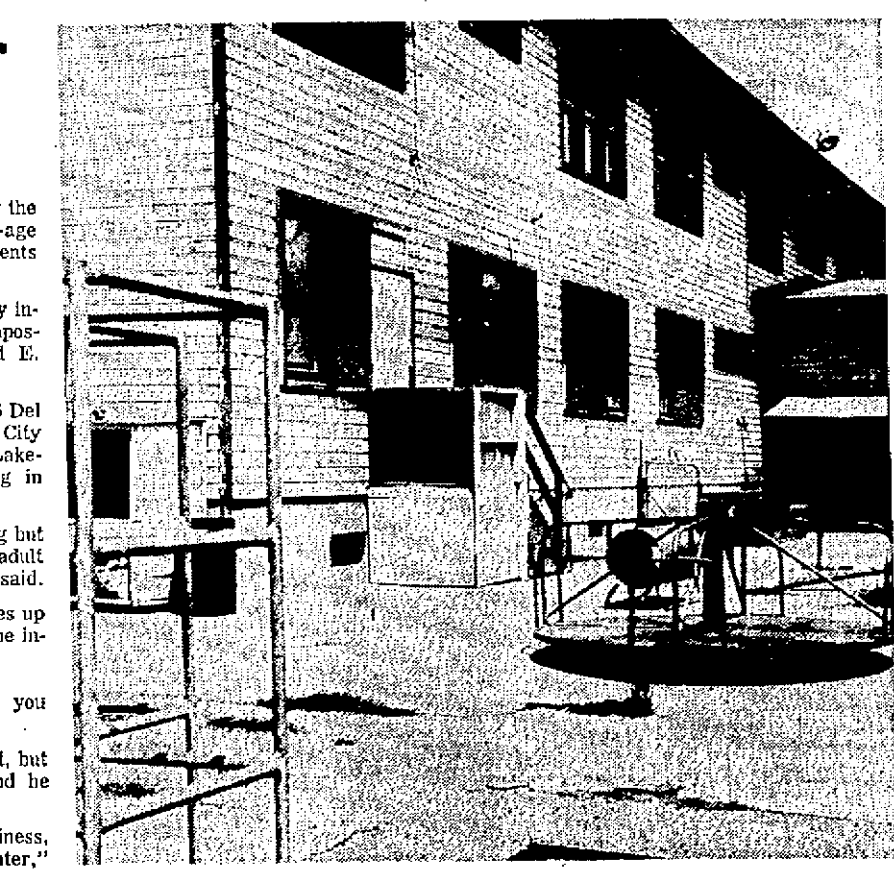

"WHEN TOLD TO LEAVE, THEY JUST tell you where to go," he declared.

Raught said he has called the Police Department, but was told the people are not breaking the law, and he can't tell them to leave the lot.

"These hoodlums are not only ruining my business, but the neighboring businesses in the shopping center," he said. "Because these hoodlums congregate on the lot, the center and fellow townsmen feel it my responsibility to get rid of them — even though the majority of them are not customers, but have just come to the lot to congregate."

Raught said he "called the mayor's office and received no satisfaction."

"My patience has simply run out, and I can't believe our city government is willing to stand by while a group of hoodlums abuse tax-paying businessmen to the point of closing their doors," Raught said.

Cold Silence of a Childless School

The heart went out of this old building in San Pedro when the 50 young pupils of the Harbor Area Retarded Children's Foundation went out of its life. Los Angeles served the eviction notice after the Department of Building and Safety declared the 25-year-old structure a fire hazard. Once the building served as the Naval Supply Depot's bachelor officers' quarters. Then came the retarded children and their school. Now there is nothing for the building or the children—except to share a common sadness.

City Votes to Apply for Art Funds

Councilmen voted Friday to authorize an application for a $10,000 grant from the National Foundation for the Arts and Humanities to purchase paintings for the Long Beach Museum of Art.

The grant must be matched on a dollar-for-dollar basis, and City Manager John R. Mansell said a "leading citizen" of Long Beach has volunteered to sponsor the raising of the required $10,000 in matching funds from private sources.

Mansell said the plan offers "an excellent opportunity to add contemporary art works to the museum," and recommended filing the application, in view of the "most gracious commitment" from the community.

Stereo, Tapes Stolen

Thieves forced open a side door of an automobile owned by Art Deiffa, 3523 Ransom St., while it was parked near the Belmont Pier, and removed a stereo tape container and tapes valued at $100, Long Beach police reported Friday.

Forecast for Sunday

Aries (March 21-April 19): Having a rather successful Sunday, with your mind to touch on everything planned. Be helpful with children.

Cancer (June 21-July 20): Strive for the assurance you can rely on. The goal today is not so much relaxation as intensification. Calm is essential to the success of the day and week.

Leo (July 21-Aug. 22): With friends trying to get your attention for their schemes, mechanical things misbehaving, and the people you would reach being out and gone, you have quite a day. The evening does better.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make an unorthodox day of it; skip most of the routines and move in other areas. Excursions are favored.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): For a change you can now enjoy being in the center of things. People all around you respond to whatever treatment you have been offering them.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unusual people surround you and may offer special opportunities to learn technical matters. Take full advantage while you can.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Introduce associates to business or political contacts. Ask friends along for outdoor activities or sport. The evening is excellent for organizing future adventures, journeys.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The most likely occurrence today is a gathering of your clan; if you have to cook get help, split up the chores. Use the opportunity to persuade people to join in future collective efforts.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Distasteful people come a great deal closer to you than in reality, today. Put your energy into the pursuit of intellectual and romantic satisfaction. Your hobbies take up your attention.

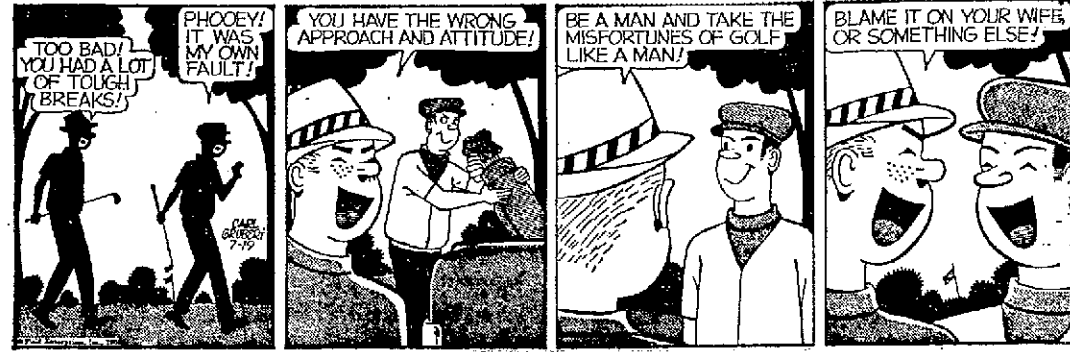

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Anybody you are following closely or you find attractive is likely to cause confusion with a change of pace you had not expected. Listen carefully. Travel, even short trips, is not favored now.

GOOD SHIP 'MAGIC ISLE' SOON WILL PLY SOUTH SEAS INSTEAD OF SOUTHLAND WATERS

SHE SERVED CATALINA

Magic Isle Sails for Samoa

The cruise ship Magic Isle, on which nearly a half-million tourists have rolled across channel to Catalina, is bound for Samoa.

The 25-year-old converted Army vessel will be doing what a lot of people would love to do — cruise among the romantic isles of Tutuila, Manua, Upolu and Sayai.

The 127-foot ship is due to sail sometime this week for Pago Pago, American Samoa. On board when she sails will be Sione "John" Patu, 27, a June graduate of Compton College.

Patu's father, Pila Patu Sr., and his brother, Pila Patu Jr., prominent Samoan exporter-importers, plan to place the vessel in service as an inter-island commuter and tourist cruise ship.

The wooden-hulled craft began service between Long Beach and Avalon in 1958. In 1963 she was sold by Avalon Navigation Co. Inc. and was moved to Wilmington, to operate out of the old Catalina Terminal. Since 1966 the Magic Isle has sailed from the new Catalina Terminal, in the San Pedro section of Los Angeles Harbor.

Built in the South Bellingham (Wash.) Shipyard, the craft was operated in Alaska waters by the Army, with the name of Coastal Forest, as a combination passenger and cargo vessel.

Although the Magic Isle carried 93,000 passengers to and from Catalina in 1968, her nearly round bottom did not make her a favorite with landlubbers. They often found it difficult to get their "sea legs" during the 27-mile, cross-channel voyage. —By Jack O. Baldwin.

Beauty's Death Baffles Police

Orange County authorities are baffled by weird circumstances in the death Friday of a young, attractive Garden Grove woman.

A homicide investigation is under way in the death of 23-year-old Karen Lucille Gourley, 13112 Allard Ave., whose nude body was found in her late-model car, parked in a field in the City of Orange.

Police Lt. O. M. Ormiston said a vacuum cleaner hose was attached to the exhaust pipe on the vehicle and the other end placed inside the car through a side window.

A preliminary autopsy report failed to disclose cause of Miss Gourley's death. Additional laboratory tests are being made in attempts to determine whether she died from carbon monoxide poisoning, coroner's investigators reported.

BURNS WERE FOUND on three fingers of the woman's right hand, Lt. Ormiston said. These indicated she might have touched the hot exhaust in fastening the hose on the pipe, he said.

A pair of woman's panties tied loosely around Miss Gourley's ankles caused investigators to temporarily set aside a suicide theory until all facts of the death are known. However, no marks or injuries were found on her that would indicate foul play.

Lt. Ormiston said a pair of slacks and a blouse were found in the car, and may have been the clothing worn by Miss Gourley prior to her death.

The coroner's office said results of the laboratory tests are not expected before next week.

Buena Park Man Pleads Insanity in Assault Case

James E. Fields faces trial Aug. 18 on charges of attempted murder and assaulting police officers in a shoot-out with a score of lawmen at a Buena Park home.

Fields has entered a dual defense plea of innocent and insanity in Judge James F. Judge's Santa Ana Criminal Court.

Fields barricaded himself in a second-story room at 7831 Franklin Ave. June 21 after an argument with his brother, police said.

When officers were called, James threatened them with a .22-caliber rifle, investigators said. He was captured after being shot in the shoulder and tear-gassed.

Torrance Must Rehire Nollac or Show Cause

Ousted Torrance Public Works Director Walter Nollac has obtained a conditional writ of mandamus ordering the city either to reinstate him with back pay or to show cause why it should not.

The city had dismissed Nollac following a three-month series of hearings before the Civil Service Commission, in which he was found guilty of two counts each of failure to perform his duties and of inefficiency.

The court order issued Friday would require the city to present its entire case against Nollac in Superior Court Division 65, Los Angeles, beginning next Friday morning.

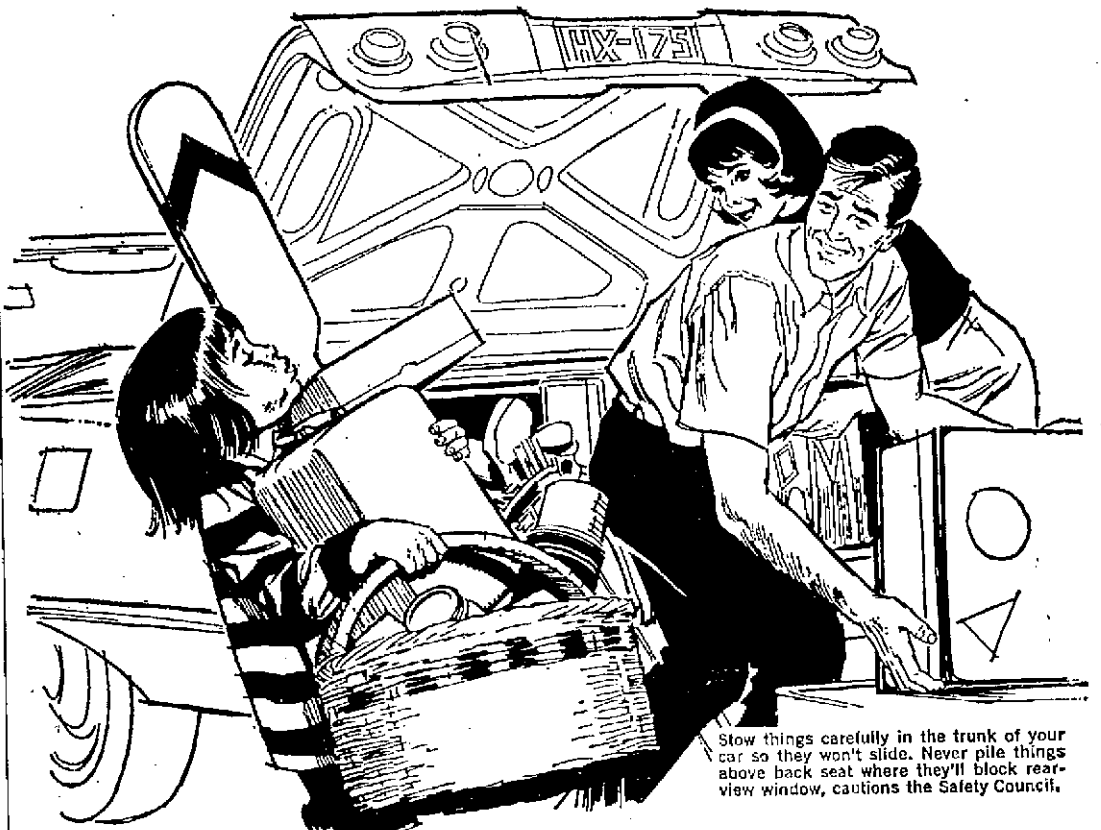

Nollac is suing for reinstatement in the $25,000-a-year job, requesting back pay to December 6, 1968, and payment of attorney fees for his defense.

Fish Tackle Gone

Fishing equipment valued at $400 was taken from the home of Joyce Bersuch, 52 La Linda Drive, after burglars forced open a garage door to gain entry, Long Beach police said Friday.

HAPPY, HAPPY DOLLS FOR HOSPITAL

Memorial Hospital of Long Beach was "dolloed up" Friday by means of "old happy couple dolls" named Joh and Uba, newly arrived from Japan aboard the MS Argentina Maru. Accepting the "symbols of youth and long life," was Donald C. Carner, pictured at left, Memorial's executive vice president. Presentation party included T. Chijirwa, representative of Mitsui O. S. K. Lines; J. W. Zundel, district manager of Williams, Dimond-Rountree Agencies Inc. of Wilmington, agents for Mitsui O. S. K., and Capt. S. Migita, master of the Argentina Maru. Dolls are a gesture of thanks for the hospital's "prompt and kind" medical service to Mitsui Lines sailors over the years.

Arrested Man Sues Huntington Beach

Norman Coatney, 41, of Los Alamitos, sued the City of Huntington Beach Friday for $125,000 damages because he was arrested on suspicion of murdering a woman motorist.

Coatney was with Miss Margaret Dinger, 39, at her Huntington Beach apartment when police arrested them both for the Jan. 16 slaying of Mrs. Hester Markee, 55.

The body of Mrs. Markee was found near her car, which had been involved in a traffic accident with Miss Dinger's car.

BEFORE scheduled arraignment, police released the couple. They had arrested Henry L. Sianez, 25, on a murder count, and said he had stolen Miss Dinger's car, crashed it into the markee machine, then stabbed Mrs. Markee during an argument.

Subsequently, Sianez was convicted in Santa Ana Superior Court of murder and car theft, and drew consecutive prison terms.

In his claims for damages, Coatney insisted his career as an engineer was endangered, and that he suffered great embarrassment. Miss Dinger did not file suit.

Arnold E. Furr, 1540 Canal Ave., told Long Beach police Friday that burglars forced open an office door and stole a radio and transmitter valued at $675.
